700 Ships Idle; 4-Hour Parley Held on Crisis

Total May Reach 2000; Operators Term Stoppage Unadulterated Strike

New York, June 16 (AP).—Assistant Secretary of Labor John W. Gibson, seeking a "quick and immediate conclusion" to an unprecedented sit-down by CIO seamen which has paralyzed shipping at many ports of the Nation, conferred tonight for more than four hours with ship owners and union officials, but there was no immediate solution of the maritime crisis.

Gibson, who arrived here from the Capital after being assigned to the dispute by Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach, talked first with Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union, largest of five unions involved in the crippling stoppage, and later with Frank J. Taylor, president of the American Merchant Marine Institute and chief negotiator for East and Gulf Coast operators.

Gibson was silent about his hour's conference with Curran, and the NMU president said only that they had reviewed the entire maritime labor situation. Curran said he would hold himself in readiness for further conferences during the night.

Almost 700 Ships Idle

A NMU spokesman disclosed meanwhile that plans had been made for more than 600 members to walk off tomorrow noon from the luxury liner America, largest United States passenger vessel, now berthed here. Officials of United States Lines said earlier there was no change in plans for the ship to sail Wednesday for Europe.

Curran said almost 700 ships were tied up in the dispute, labeled a "strike" by operators and a "no contract, no work" stoppage by union leaders. The NMU head said 300 of the affected ships were in East Coast ports, and predicted the national total would increase to 2000 soon if negotiations with tanker companies were unsuccessful.

Taylor, who said reports indicated seamen were aboard the ships but idle, insisted the stoppage was a "pure, simple unadulterated strike."

Sessions Postponed

Just before Gibson's assignment was announced, two Federal conciliators had said further mediation sessions between union and operator representatives here had been postponed indefinitely.

Curran's instructions, effective last midnight when the union's contract with shipowners expired, directed the seamen not to sign-on or sail vessels but he said "all crews should remain aboard as long as possible."

Union spokesmen said that if the men were put off the ships, operators would be blamed for a "lockout." Picketing is not to be

And Sugar Import

Strike Hurts U. S. Grain, Coal Export

America's tremendous exports of grain and coal to war-ravaged nations of Europe and Asia will be seriously affected by the maritime strike that began yesterday, Government officials predict.

Officials also are concerned that the strike may:

1. Shut off imports of Cuban and Puerto Rican sugar, now at their seasonal height. Domestic consumption of sugar also is at its high point of the year, due to industrial and home canning, seasonal demand for soft drinks and ice cream.

Officials do not foresee at this time any serious shortage for home consumption. They do anticipate tightening up of industrial allotments if the strike is prolonged. They also fear that removal of price controls and rationing for industrial use, which they had planned for late this summer, may be delayed until October 31.

Fear Oil Shortage

2. Add to the already serious danger of a gasoline and oil famine on the East Coast, New England, parts of the Midwest and the Pacific Northwest.

Aroused by the danger of gasoline and oil shortages by early fall, Interior Secretary J. A. Krug has invited other Cabinet members and heads of certain Federal agencies to a discussion of the situation today.

Krug's office made plain that rationing of oil is not being considered. So far the shortage has been felt chiefly by the armed forces, which have been unable to fill more than half their petroleum requirements for the year.

Exports at New High

Both grain and coal exports were at all-time highs when the strike began. Last month about 250 ships were in use to transport 1.6 million tons of grain overseas. A total of 505 ships was used to carry 4.4 million tons of coal.

More than half of these are American flagships, now strike-bound.

One official pointed out that because exports of both coal and grain have been at full capacity, all shipments halted because of the strike will be completely canceled.

The shutdown also will seriously affect the already acute shortage of boxcars, officials predict.

Arlington Boy Dies Of Polio; Second In Area for 1947

The second polio death in the Greater Washington area this year was reported to the Arlington Health Department yesterday.

The victim was 5-year-old Glynn S. Taylor of 2821 South Ninth st., Arlington, who died in Children's Hospital Saturday.

The only child of Mr. and Mrs. Shelton B. Taylor, the boy was taken to Children's Hospital Thursday with symptoms of generalized paralysis, according to his physician, Dr. Robert C. Hoods.

Not long after admission to the hospital, the child went into a coma, the doctor said.

The case was added to the seven cases previously reported from the Greater Washington area. Two cases have been discovered in Montgomery County, one of them fatal; three nonfatal cases in the District; one in Prince Georges County, and a previous case in Arlington County.

'Big 2' Should Meet—Wallace; Stassen Urges Speed in Europe

Economic Reconstruction Can't Wait, Republican Avers

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

The United States cannot afford to wait for Europe to draw up a plan for economic reconstruction, former Gov. Harold E. Stassen said yesterday.

Speed is so essential in restoring European production that "we must act on the problem of the Ruhr without delay and without waiting," he told a commencement audience at Swarthmore, Pa.

"Clearly economic unity in Europe is of major importance," said the former Governor, who last month urged setting aside 10 per cent of American annual production to put Europe back on its feet economically.

"But may I sound a warning if we sit back and wait for the nations of Europe to agree upon a plan, we will wait too long?

"If we sit back and wait for the nations of Europe to present their joint needs, we will simply face a presentation of needs much greater than we can possibly fulfill.

"The entire deteriorating economic system in Europe cries for speed and it cries for priority decisions in which we are in a better position to exercise leadership with our perspective than any of the individual nations directly concerned.

"To follow a counsel of waiting for Europe to propose its own solution, in its present distressed and disturbed conditions, would be too much like waiting for an ill and injured patient to recommend the course and nature of his own treatment for recovery."

In this Stassen was taking sharp issue with Secretary Marshall and official American policy. The Secretary said at Harvard, and repeated it last week, that Europe must "take the initiative," and he indicated that the European nations must agree on programs before the United States would help.

In line with Marshall's advice, the British and French governments are scurrying busily to find some method of getting European agreement. Their Foreign Ministers will meet in Paris this week, and both governments are consulting Russia, but the prospects of Soviet cooperation were regarded in London as "very discouraging" in the light of a bitter

Former Vice President Sounds Third Party Threat Again

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Henry A. Wallace last night called upon President Truman to seek world peace through a conference with Stalin, Molotov and Marshall in Berlin and to commit the Democratic Party to peace or face the threat of a third party in 1948.

President Truman's "only possible chance for election is to make the Democratic Party the party of peace," he declared.

"We must settle basic differences with the Russians," he said, "as completely as possible; or we shall continue to increase the friction which develops in every attempt to settle secondary problems!

A moderately-enthusiastic audience of 10,000 gave Wallace his chief applause when he sounded the threat of a new party "even if it has no chance of election success in 1948."

That new party will develop, he declared, "if both parties insist on pursuing the present suicidal course toward war and depression."

"I am convinced," Wallace said later, "by a careful study of the American political scene that a truly liberal party—whether it be the Democratic Party or a new party—can elect a useful number of Congressmen in 1948."

It was early evident that Wallace was going to use his Washington appearance to carry the fight to the man who fired him from the Cabinet last year, President Truman.

The first real burst of applause that greeted him came when he declared:

"I admit to a certain shame when I hear some of our official statements of protest about election methods in Eastern Europe; and look at the same time at certain election methods in South Carolina and Kansas City—and the absence of any election at all here in Washington."

A bit later, he got another round when he declared:

"Twenty-five million dollar loyalty investigations will never stop communism. Only full stomachs and security can do that job."

Throughout his speech, Wallace kept to three ideas:

1. That the present Administra-

Big, Orderly Crowd Hears Wallace Talk

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Ten thousand Washington residents filled the Watergate Amphitheater to hear Henry A. Wallace denounce the Truman doctrine and call for peace.

It was a big crowd, a friendly crowd but a crowd that sat on its hands.

There was only one truly spontaneous demonstration and that was when Wallace rose to speak. Sporadic cries of "Wallace for President," and "Wallace in '48" came scattering through the audience.

As the meeting closed Dr. Clark Foreman, president of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, under whose auspices the meeting was held, announced that there had been 8500 paid admissions, and that more than 2000 persons were assembled outside the gates.

Foreman said that a collection of $8000 had been taken up during the evening. In previous announcements the Washington committee of the SCHW had stated that all funds raised would be used to advance its program for democracy in Washington, including District suffrage and nonsegregation.

The mixed audience that gathered to hear the former Vice President was perhaps an average Washington gathering. There were many elderly people, many persons who had obviously come out of curiosity, and here and there little groups of Wallace rooters whose voices were isolated in the apathy that hung over the gathering.

In general, Park Police said, there was less trouble keeping order than usual. Orderly groups overflowed the steps and lined the bridges overlooking the shell.

The barge which usually holds musicians was decorated with a large sign: "Democracy for Democracy's capital . . . Washing-Committee Southern Conference for Human Welfare."

Two other signs were on the stage, both containing quotations from the late President Roosevelt, "The Only Thing We Have to Fear is Fear Itself," and "The South is the Nation's No. 1 Economic Problem."

The meeting was opened with the singing of the Star-Spangled Banner. Dr. Joseph L. Johnson, chairman of the Washington Com-

Russia Blasts Marshall Idea

The first blast of official Soviet criticism was leveled yesterday at Secretary Marshall's plan for the economic reconstruction of Europe.

Commentator Boris Leontiev, writing in Pravda, denounced it as a "plan for political pressure with dollars and a program for interference in the internal affairs of other states." His attack was later broadcast by the official Moscow radio.

It came as Britain and France showed they were trying to take the initiative in drawing up a European program, as Marshall suggested in his now-famous speech at Harvard.

To Consult With Moscow

These were some of the developments:

1. A British Foreign Office spokesman said his government would consult with Moscow soon, through diplomatic channels, on Soviet participation in drawing up a European program

2. Herve Alphand, chief of the economic section of the French Foreign Office, announced in Paris that France had suggested a series of inter-European technical committees to draft and administer the program. The suggestion, he said, had already been sent to Marshall and would be discussed in the coming Paris talks between Foreign Minister Bidault and Foreign Secretary Bevin of Great Britain.

3. The United Nations Economic Commission for Europe, on which Russia is represented, outlined in Geneva the measures Europe might take toward reconstruction in many fields. This commission's work has been blocked by Russia for the past few months.

The Russian commentator said the Truman doctrine of aid to Greece and Turkey was becoming increasingly unpopular in Europe and the United States and that the U. N. Has Plan To Aid Europe

Geneva, Switzerland, June 16 (U.P.).—A sweeping plan for cooperation toward Europe's recovery was offered today by the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe in a 45-page report to be submitted to U. N. members.

The plan coincides and fits in with the plan of Secretary of State George C. Marshall for European recovery. It emphasized the need for immediate, effective international action on the most pressing problems including shortages of essential materials.

Executive Secretary Gunar Myrdal of the commission said that cooperation was needed:

1. In reconstruction and development of electric power to modernize European industry.
2. In promoting the production of materials needed for reconstruction.
3. In the satisfactory distribution of scarce commodities.
4. In the exchange of raw materials and capital equipment.

The report suggested the setting up of committees to work out recommendations at once on these four points.

As regards shortages, the report suggested that the committees promote production of substitutes for scarce materials, especially nitrogen. The need for concentration on such problems as shortages of timber and alkali supplies also was pointed out.

As regards coal, the report said that international action was need-

'Didn't Want 'em to Find Me'

Boy, 6, Watches Rescue Squad Drag Excavation Pit for Him

A rescue squad dragged a flooded excavation pit where the new General Accounting Office is going to be for two hours yesterday looking for 6-year-old Danny Drake.

But they didn't find Danny.

He was watching them all the time.

"I knew they was huntin' for me," the red-haired, freckled-faced boy said, "and I didn't want 'em to find me."

It all started when Danny, who lives at 327 5th st. nw. with his grandparents, father, and brother, decided to run away from home "to pick apples along the river." Danny's mother died six months ago.

He left home about 12 o'clock with Bobby Hudson, 9, of 476 Massachusetts ave. nw. to play.

His grandmother, Mrs. William Byrd, went to look for him, shortly thereafter and called police.

Several boys, who said they had seen Danny playing on the bank of the fenced-in enclosure at 6th and G sts. nw., also called police about 2:30 p. m.

Policemen from No. 1 Precinct, Rescue Squad No. 1 and Engine Company No. 6 discovered foot prints leading down from the side of the bank. Six Rescue Squad men dragged the muddy water, which is 8 feet deep in one spot for two hours.

Ten minutes after they quit,

Fear of Aid to Franco Offered As Defense for Refugee Group

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

Fear that the House Un-American Activities Committee planned to pass on information to Dictator Franco caused the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee to withhold its records.

That's what Defense Attorney O. John Rogge tried to tell a District Court jury yesterday in his opening statement at the trial of 16 members of the Refugee Committee's board.

But Justice Richmond B. Keech stopped him from attacking the motives of the House Committee as irrelevant to the charges of conspiracy and contempt. The charges arose from refusal of the refugee group to furnish information to the House Committee in April, 1946.

However, during a 50-minute bench conference out of hearing of the jury and press, the entire statement Rogge intended making was read into the record.

It accused the committee of "silk stocking" handling of Fascists and "third degrees" for liberals.

Later in the afternoon, a talkative juror caused a mild flurry. Assistant United States Attorney Charles B. Murray informed the court at another bench conference he had been approached by a juror who asked if he could ask a question not pertaining to the trial. Murray said he stopped the juror from further talk.

Rogge immediately asked for a mistrial, but Judge Keech declared no harm had been done and denied the motion.

The jury was given a stern warning to talk to no one about the trial, not even among themselves. Nor are they to read newspaper accounts or listen to radio broadcasts of the trial.

Rogge's original statement declared that the Treasury Department had complete access to the records while the refugee commit-

GOP Girds for Vote On Tax Veto Today; Hope for Cut Now Dim

Speaks at Princeton Today

President May Defer Action On Labor Bill to Last Minute

President Truman may not act on the Taft-Hartley labor bill until the last possible moment—next Friday—his press secretary hinted yesterday.

White House Secretary Charles G. Ross told newsmen that there would be no action on labor legislation until after Mr. Truman returned from Princeton University tonight. He speaks there this morning and will receive an honorary degree.

Ross was asked whether the President might withhold action until just before the deadline, when he must either veto or let the bill become law. Ross replied, "Possibly."

Meantime, in Chicago, a high Administration official made unflattering remarks about the bill. Keen Johnson, Undersecretary of Labor, declared that if it became law it would be a "bonanza for lawyers."

He said that if the bill were signed, large enterprises should "start looking for the best lawyer" they could find, "and assign him the task of deciding what the law means."

An even stronger speech against the measure was prepared for delivery yesterday by an Assistant Secretary of Labor, Philip Hannah, at Grand Junction, Colo. He was obliged to remain in Washington, however, and canceled the address.

The fact that two sub-Cabinet officers were committeed against the bill, however, was considered significant. While it by no means indicated that Mr. Truman had determined on a veto, it at least suggested he had not yet decided to sign the measure.

Close Test Seen In House But Senate Is Likely To Sustain Truman

(Mr. Truman's Text, Page 10.)

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday stopped with a veto what he said was "the wrong kind of tax reduction at the wrong time."

The GOP's four billion dollar tax cut bill, he told Congress, is "unsafe" from the standpoint of Government finances, adding:

"It offers dubious, ill-apportioned and risky benefits at the expense of a sound tax policy . . ."

House Votes Today

Appealing for an over-rider, House Republican leaders ordered a vote on the veto today. The House test will be close, with a 50-50 chance the veto will be sustained in that chamber.

If the House, however, votes to override, the veto will go to a Senate vote tomorrow. There, Republicans appeared even less likely to muster the two-thirds majority required to set aside a veto.

Reports that several Senate Democrats who originally opposed tax reduction may vote to override gave Administration leaders a brief scare.

The change-over was attributed to disappointment in some quarters at failure of Mr. Truman to give any comfort to Democratic champions of economy.

A quick Senate leadership check, however, indicated Democratic shifts to support of the veto will about offset the disaffections.

A flurry of proposals to pass a "quickie" bill simply changing the effective date of the tax cuts from July 1, 1947, to January 1, 1948, rippled across the Capitol.

Republican leaders, however, opposed such a move. Senate Finance Chairman Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.) said there was "no point" to handing the President a second bill.

Possible 1948 Issue

Others said frankly the Republicans are ready to go to the country on the veto issue. Said one: "The 1948 issues will be high taxes and high spending."

Whether, as reported, the Administration will favor some tax reduction in 1948, the President did not say.

He said the time for tax reduction will come when inflationary pressures have ceased and the price structure is on a more stable basis.

"How long it will take for this point to be reached is impossible to predict," he told Congress. "Clearly, it has not been reached as yet. Tax reduction now would add to, rather than correct, maladjustments in the economic structure."

In his crisp 1500-word message,

Senate Votes Another Year Of Child Care

Housing Hearings On D. C. Measure Slated Thursday

One-year extension of Washington's child day care centers beyond June 30 was approved by the Senate yesterday.

Senator John S. Cooper (R., Ky.) won unanimous consent to send the bill to the House where subcommittee hearings are slated for Thursday.

Cooper said he will confer with House District leaders about details of the Senate-approved bill. It would bar about 60 of the nearly 400 children now using the centers. First to go would be those who have both parents working.

The bill authorizes $150,000 to pay for the next year, of which about $40,000 would come from parents' fees. It was one of 13 local bills passed by the Senate yesterday.

In the House, Representative Walt Horan (R., Wash.) presented a bill to make new out-of-town pupils in District public schools pay tuition fees. The plan would not touch the 3270 out-of-town students now receiving free tuition in the local schools at an estimated cost to the District of $426,120 a year.

Horan, chairman of the House District Appropriations Subcommittee, also introduced a bill to boost from 20 to 30 years the time in which the District would build up the teachers' retirement fund to the point where it would become self-sustaining.

Watch inspectors for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad convened yesterday at the Statler.

The meeting was scheduled for 2 p. m.

Action Sought On District Bills in Senate

Revenue, Teachers' Pay Measures May Come Up Tomorrow

Senate leaders are seeking action tomorrow on Washington's revenue and teachers' pay increase bills, Senator Harry P. Cain (R., Wash.), said late yesterday.

Earlier Senator Arthur Vandenberg (R., Mich.) disclosed that President Truman has listed the District revenue bill among those he is hoping to receive by June 30.

Cain, chairman of the Senate District fiscal subcommittee in charge of the revenue measure, said the decision to ask Senate passage is still tentative. Both teacher and tax bills may have to go to a conference with the House after the Senate acts.

On the teachers' pay bill, Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.) announced yesterday he is filing an amendment to see that teachers now rated "superior" get the benefit of the $500 higher pay schedule allowed for those with masters' degrees under the bill.

Plane Shot Down By Rifle; 2 Film Figures Uninjured

Santa Monica, Calif., June 16 (U.P.).—An amphibious plane, carrying Film Star Jon Hall and his wife, screen and radio singer Frances Langford, was shot down today by a single bullet which struck the propeller and forced the pilot to make a crash landing.

A sportsman at the nearby Santa Monica Gun Club nabbed a 14-year-old boy who, he believed, fired the shot. The boy, whose name was not disclosed, was turned over to the police. He said he had been hunting rabbits, but denied that he had fired at the plane.

The plane was flying at an altitude of about 600 feet when the bullet struck the propeller.

Army Tells Its Million Soldiers To Guard Against Communism

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The U. S. Army last night warned its million soldiers throughout the world against the dangers of communism.

Copies of a new War Department publication which turns the spotlight on the American Communist Party as an agent of Soviet Russia were radioed to overseas commands. Posts in this country will receive the document by mail.

It will be used as the basis for lectures next week to United States troops all over the globe.

Pulling no punches, the "Army Talk" pamphlet declares that Communists here and everywhere "support the Soviet Union."

"The Communists hate our American Army in particular," the War Department pamphlet states, "because the presence of one million trained men who have pledged their lives to 'defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, whomsoever' is a strong barrier against their aims to take over the Government."

It credits "Communists in and out of the Army" with "near mutiny" agitation for bringing soldiers home after V-J Day. "Their purpose was obvious," it was said—to reduce American military strength in occupied areas, to give communism "a fertile field to work."

Front-piece of "Army Talk No. 80" carries a picture of the Statue of Liberty, with the hammer and sickle casting a heavy shadow over the symbol of democracy. A foreword declares that this edition "deals with a subject of vital interest to the security of the United States."

"It is one about which there is considerable misunderstanding and ignorance," the Army adds.

GENERAL VIEW OF THE CROWD AT THE WATERGATE LAST NIGHT ABOUT AN HOUR BEFORE HENRY WALLACE BEGAN HIS SPEECH. SENATOR PEPPER (D., FLA.) ALSO SPOKE

Perlman Denies 'Go-Between' Acts

Nominee for Solicitor General Tells Senate Group Charge Is Unfounded

By The Associated Press

Philip B. Perlman, nominee for Solicitor General, told a Senate subcommittee yesterday he had "never been a go-between between political bosses and individuals or corporations."

Perlman, a Democrat and a Baltimore lawyer, said such relations had been "implied" previously before the Senate group reviewing his nomination and said "the suggestion does me an injustice."

There were these other developments in today's hearing:

1. Perlman testified his private fortune is "between $200,000 and $250,000" and said his net income in the last two years, after deduction of taxes and expenses, was about $15,000 annually. He said he gave $5000 of the $15,000 each of the two years to charity.

Charitable Work Cited

2. He testified he had not charged fees when he handled legal work in connection with charitable or educational bequests, including a 15-million-dollar gift for hospital construction in North Carolina from the late Mrs. Moses H. Cone, which was announced last week.

3. Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.), chairman of the subcommittee, asked Perlman to produce at a further session today (2:30 p. m., EDT), records of his relations with the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and a company manufacturing voting machines. Perlman testified previously he had received retainer fees from the two.

4. The nominee said that during the time he was city solicitor of Baltimore from 1923 to 1926 he gave up his law practice entirely. He asserted he practiced law while he was Maryland secretary of state previously because "it was customary for a secretary of state, with a part-time office, to practice law if he was a lawyer."

"Go-Between" Charge Discussed

Perlman said, discussing charges he had been a "go-between" contacting political bosses, that he had not made "more than three or four" appearances before the Maryland State Assembly in 20 years, and before the city council "not more than two or three times" in the same period.

He said "that's the extent of what has been characterized here time after time as my experiences as a lobbyist."

Perlman listed his clients, including Mrs. Cone, at some length, after commenting "There has been such a searching inquiry as to the kind of clients I have had."

He related that he had done all legal work for the Baltimore Museum of Art and the Walters Art Gallery "over a number of years without charging a fee" and said he handled a recent $300,000 bequest to the art museum and other donations to charities and educational institutions without charge.

He said he asked no fees in such cases because "I am interested in helping bring such projects about."

Soviets Blast Marshall Idea

Marshall suggestions were an effort to present American policy in a more attractive and "embellished form."

Marshall's efforts, Leontiev explained, were directed at convincing Americans that "the dollar expansion is dictated by the desire to prevent an approaching economic crisis in the United States" and at creating "some sort of system of collective responsibility of these European debtors to Wall Street."

"After the carefully worded phrase that policies of the United States are not directed against any country or doctrine, Marshall said: 'Any government which undertakes maneuvers aimed at obstructing the restoration of other countries cannot expect aid from us,'" the commentator continued.

Referring to the Secretary of State's later news conference statement that his plan envisaged the inclusion of all Europe, including Soviet Russia, Leontiev said "this additional explanation by the Secretary is, however, an obvious contradiction of the policy of the United States in regard to the states of eastern Europe."

"There should be no doubt which nations precisely come under this mysterious definition" of eligibility for aid, he said.

Leontiev said the Secretary of State would like to present his case so it would look to the American people as if he were ready "to participate in the economic restoration of all Europe," but the USSR and the countries of eastern Europe were holding "aloof and excepting themselves from Europe," so far as American aid was concerned.

Summing up, the commentator declared: "The real meaning of Marshall's reservations, his public approval of the idea for a United States of Europe, and the animation created by the speech among supporters of (Winston) Churchill's organization (for a United States of Europe), all indicate that the former political meaning of American policy has to be presented to the American people in an embellished form."

Under the French plan for reconstruction, all European countries which want to take part would be represented on the committees on coal, transport, steel and agriculture.

Alphand announced the plan after American Ambassador Jefferson Caffery talked for more than an hour to Premier Paul Ramadier. They discussed various diplomatic subjects but principally the Marshall plan and French needs under it, it was understood.

Alphand said the committtees France suggests would be asked to determine the exact needs of participating countries and the extent to which the needs could be filled by other European countries.

Under the French plan, the United States would be called on to supply only those reconstruction materials and tools which European countries could not supply for each other.

"Europe cannot reconstruct its war-shattered economy without considerable economic effort by each nation in Europe," Alphand said. "No amount of external aid poured into Europe can do the job alone."

Alphand said France proposed that information which the committees obtained should be sent to already existing international groups like the European coal organization and the European central transport organization.

Wallace Asks Truman to Meet Stalin in Peace Talk in Berlin

tion is not the Roosevelt "team which saved our capitalistic democracy from its own folly" in 1933.

2. That we have no reason to fear the Soviet Union, but that "the Russians, as they study our press and listen to the statements of high officials, naturally think they have reasons for fear."

3. That by the "dangerous practice of arming reactionary governments" and the "policy of fighting ideas with force, we shall drive the peoples of Europe and Asia to completely Socialist economies, and we shall drive them into military alliance with Russia."

"We must be practical," said the chief critic of the Truman foreign policy. "The time has come to substitute a 'get practical' policy for the Dulles-Vandenberg 'get tough' policy."

Efforts by the American Anti-Communist Association to get a court order barring him from the amphitheater failed.

Given Big Ovation

Wallace received one of his biggest ovations when he declared:

"Our hopes for a strong United Nations rest on our ability to make peace with the Soviet Union. It should be easier to reach agreement with a valiant ally than with the dictator in Argentina.

"I am convinced that Russians genuinely desire peace," Wallace asserted.

"In three important interviews this year, with Alexander Worth, British newspaperman, Elliott Roosevelt and Harold Stassen, Stalin clearly indicated that he believes cooperation possible and necessary.

"Many editorial writers and commentators insist on quoting Stalin of 25 years ago that peace is not possible in a world part Socialist and part capitalist.

"I can see no legitimate reason for believing Stalin's statements of 25 years ago and yet doubting his statements of the last six months.

"Stalin can change his mind in 25 years. Most of us have. Twenty-five years ago I was a Republican."

Other points that Wallace urged upon the Administration were:

1. Urged, as another "first step" toward eventual disarmament, that the United States propose a "complete ban" on international traffic in weapons of war.

2. Suggested the Administration and Democratic Party lead a campaign to nationalize domestic munitions industries. "The people should own and control our armaments plants," he said.

3. Called on the President to exercise "vigor" in behalf of what he called "positive" programs on housing, health, educational, and other legislation.

The House Committee on Un-American activities, which called the conference a "Communist front organization," said in advance it planned to have "observers' 'at the scene. Wallace and Clark Foreman, conference president, welcomed them and denied the conference is linked with Communists.

In his speech, Wallace expressed hope that Government workers in the audience would not be "purged" because of their presence.

Leading up to his proposal for a Berlin conference between American and Soviet leaders, Wallace said American hopes for a strong United Nations rest on "our ability to make peace with the Soviet Union."

Talks of 3d Party

Wallace said if President Truman and Secretary Marshall make a sincere effort to get a settlement with the Russians and carry their fight for approval into the 1948 elections the people will vote right and in 1949 there will be "a peace Congress, not a war Congress."

Failing that, there may be a third party, he said, adding:

"It will be important—if the Democratic Party succumbs to Wall Street domination—to have a new party to let the people of the world know that those who believe in peace and understanding still have some means of expression."

"And like third parties in other periods of American history," he added, "it would have a long term influence on American life."

Wallace asserted the present Administration "has departed from the course Roosevelt charted." But he said he still has faith that the Democratic Party "can come back again to the New Freedom of Woodrow Wilson and the New Deal of Franklin Roosevelt."

He said he would "prefer to see a genuine two party system" rather than a third party.

Federal Judge James M. Proctor, in dismissing the request to bar the former Vice President from using the Interior Department's Watergate Ampitheater near the Lincoln Memorial, said:

Big Crowd Hears Speech

mittee of SCHW, was the first speaker.

Johnson launched an immediate attack upon the House Committee on Un-American Activities, noting that the Committee had said it would have several observers present.

He said he wondered if the committee had observers present at the South Carolina lynchings or in the South Carolina jury room when the not-guilty verdicts were handed down.

He asked if they had observers at the Ku Klux Klan meetings.

"It is difficult to understand," Johnson said, "why there should have been any question about a meeting addressed by the former Vice President of the United States.

"We invited former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes to speak here to us, too, but he declined our invitation."

Johnson said District residents had shown by their presence at the Wallace rally that they are not easily frightened.

Introducing Henry Wallace, Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) said that "two years after the war's end hope had turned to despair and defeatism."

"If," said Pepper, "an election could be held in the world today as to who was the world's foremost private citizen, as a spokesman of peace and democracy; if there were to be chosen one man in private life who speaks to the world in the spirit of Franklin D. Roosevelt, it would be the American citizen I now proudly present to you, Henry A. Wallace."

Wrapping the mantle of Roosevelt about the shoulders of Wallace, Pepper won as much applause as Wallace himself.

It is against "the black scene" of the world's despair that one must view Wallace, Pepper told the audience.

"He is not a defeatist," said Pepper. "He is unwilling to accept philosophy of despair. He believes America can be a prosperous country in a prosperous world."

attack on the program from an official Moscow commentator yesterday.

Stassen, fresh from a personal survey of Europe, used the coal problem as an example of the futility of waiting for a European agreement. Unless Ruhr coal production is boosted quickly above its present level of 40 per cent of prewar production, he warned, "the next winter in Europe will be more grim and disastrous than the last one."

"Action in the Ruhr," he said, "does not require the previous agreement of all the countries of Europe . . . It only requires agreement between the British and ourselves on a program for us to send in essential mining supplies, consumer goods for the population, to establish a system of incentive for both management and owners and men, with a prompt clarification of ownership and a clear-cut policy of redeveloping the Ruhr as a center of modern peoples' capitalism in Europe."

Such a program, he added, should be accomplished "without socialization and without monopoly, with the workers sharing in the fruits of high production, with its owners and managers making a profit from high production, and with all the consumers of Europe benefiting through that high production.

Will Not Solve Problems

"The development of high production of coal in the Ruhr," he said, "will not solve all the economic problems of Europe, but the problems of Europe cannot be solved without high production of coal from the Ruhr. Every month that goes by with this extremely low coal output from the Ruhr is not only a greater cost to the people of the United States and England, but it also means a cost that pours out in a wasted dole and does not carry with it a quality of rebuilding."

Another high priority for the United States, he said, was reviving the economic strength of England.

"We must begin now to face the problem of the rapidly dwindling dollar credit of this sturdy isle, our friend and ally," he declared. He added that in the light of the recent British decisions on India "no man now living should underestimate the importance, and the quality, and the capacity to contribute to mankind, of England.

Agrees on Decision

Stassen said he thoroughly subscribed to Secretary Marshall's decision to avoid any further piecemeal help to Europe, and was "very much encouraged by it." He repeated his proposal, made in a speech in Iowa prior to Marshall's, that the United States "must extend substantial aid from our current production toward the rebuilding of the war-torn world for a period of a decade or more."

He cautioned also that there were limits to what America could do, and suggested setting such limits "as a bipartisan matter with the best of counsel and advice of economists and other leaders of our country." This appeared to indorse Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg's (R., Mich.) proposal last week for a bipartisan council to advise the administration and Congress on a European program.

Stassen's warning against waiting for European agreement coincided with the advice of the influential London weekly, the Economist, in its current issue.

Need More Time

Europe might attempt a joint assessment of its needs and its resources, said the Economist, recalling the precedent of the Combined Boards that sat in Washington during the war.

"It must be done quickly, but it cannot be done quickly. It must be big enough to take the breath away, but there is no time to construct even the simplest structure. And, for all the difficulties, it would be criminal to let such a wonderful opportunity slip."

The only course, in the Economist's opinion, was that the governments of western Europe, within the next few months, "should solemnly pledge themselves to the principle of united action, and set themselves a specific time-table embodying it in practical measures."

Wartime Axis Foe In Hungary Seized

Resistance Leader Reported Held as Party to Conspiracy

Budapest, June 16 (U.P.).—Col. Istvan Zemes, wartime resistance leader and chief of the Hungarian military delegation at the Paris Peace Conference, has been arrested as a conspirator, political circles said today.

It was reported that Zemes was arrested yesterday after his apartment had been searched and that four others were seized with him.

Political informants reported also that six or seven additional members of the Smallholders Party of former Premier Ferenc Nagy would be expelled from the party tomorrow.

Minister of Justice Istvan Ries disclosed that an investigation had been opened regarding the advisability of bringing conspiracy charges against Nagy and his party colleague, former Parliament President Bela Vargo, who is believed to be in Austria.

Admits Secret Contacts

If the authorities decide to try Nagy and Varga in their absence, Ries said, they will be judged by a special parliamentary committee.

In the third day of the mass trial of an alleged conspirators against the republic, former Smallholder Deputy Paul Yacko admitted today that he had been in contact with a "secret organization" but he denied other charges. Yacko said that as high sheriff of Vas County, on the Australian border, he attempted to establish escape routes for prominent men involved in conspiracy charges.

Ries said that if the big powers "agreed" Hungary would willingly put all its material concerning the alleged parts of Nagy, Varga and Bela Kovacs, former general secretary of the Smallholders, at the disposal of a United Nations investigating committee. Charges alleged to have been made by Kovacs as a prisoner of the Russians lie behind the present political crisis.

"If the United States investigated the situation here and learned the facts, it would expel, Nagy and Tibor Eckhardt at once," Ries said.

Former Party President

Eckhardt, former president of the Peasant Party—out of which grew the Smallholders—left Hungary at the start of the war, going first to Great Britain and then the United States, where he urged his countrymen to abandon the Axis.

Ries said that the State Department's actions as regards Hungary were misguided because they were not based on the "true facts."

Ries, a Socialist, and other Socialists, seemed considerably concerned over American policy in Europe.

"What is America aiming at?" a party official asked. "Does America want to take over the role of Germany and cause another world catastrophe? We Socialists are afraid that the interests of capital are more important to the American Government than the peace of its people. The dollar is playing a bigger role in world affairs today than ever before."

The Socialists are collaborating with the Communists. But there seems to be an atmosphere of strain and occasional sharp dissension.

'Be Prepared'

Kenney Sees Only 8 Hours War Warning

Knoxville, Tenn., June 16 (INS).—Gen. George C. Kenney, commanding general of the strategic air command, warned tonight that the United States will have only eight hours to prepare to defend itself in the event of a future war.

Kenney, veteran of air war in the Pacific during World War II, pleaded for adequate national defense measures immediately in an address here before a convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

He stressed the current weakness of the United States as a military power by pointing out that two years ago the air forces could throw 1000 B-29 bombers into a single air strike, while on May 16, 1947, we could put less than 150 B-29 bombers over New York and Washington during a maneuver." Kenney declared:

"Only a state of preparedness to repel attack can prevent our being attacked . . . a defenseless nation is always the nation most subject to attack.

"That attack has been made easier, more deadly and harder to defend against the tremendous impetus given by World War II to scientific research and development."

Kenney warned that there will be no time to develop and produce planes and other equipment after we are attacked, adding:

"Remember that every airplane we used in World War II was already in production on December 7, 1941. Even under the stress and drive of war, we were unable to develop a new airplane and get it into operation nearly four years later before the Japs finally quit."

General Kenney declared "delay can be fatal . . . the bombs are only eight hours away from you."

ed here also. But it commented: "In the not too distant future atomic energy may deal another blow to the coal industry."

The report suggested close cooperation with the food and agriculture organization of the U.N. and the exchange among members of information on housing. It also proposed liaison with the big four control commission in Berlin on German trade and production problems as part of the all-European situation.

The commission proposed that the committees it recommends should include specially invited countries which are not U. N. members as well as nations which belong to the U. N.

The European coal organization would operate within the economic commission for Europe, after December 31 next, as a special committee which would take over allocation of coal and draft a long-range planning program.

Future coal export allocations would be judged on a country's basic relief needs and as an incentive for countries to play a maximum part in European reconstruction.

The commission will hold its second session here July 5. Its provisional program includes consideration of the transfer of functions of the emergency committee of Europe and of the European coal organization to the commission.

Nature of Visit Bars Palace To Senora Peron, London Says

MEETING IN MADRID—Generalissimo Franco with his wife (at right) welcome Madame Maria Eva Duarte de Peron, wife of the President of Argentina, in the grand salon of Spain's Royal Palace in Madrid. Mme. Peron receives a diamond studded Grand Cross of Isabel the Catholic. Franco wears the Grand Collar of San Martin the Liberator, which he received from President Peron some time ago

London, June 16 (U.P.).—A Foreign Office spokesman explained carefully today that Senora Juan D. Peron, wife of the Argentine President, was coming to London on a private visit, not a state visit, and that was why she would not stay at Buckingham Palace as Mrs. Roosevelt did a few years ago.

The spokesman scolded British papers for printing speculation on other reasons why Senora Peron would not stay at the palace. One said Senora Peron was not welcome in Britain.

"She will be a most welcome visitor," said the spokesman.

Flexible Army Enlistments Up to 6 Years Pass Congress

Legislation was passed by both the Senate and House yesterday setting up a flexible system of Army enlistments for terms up to six years service.

The bills are aimed to forestall an Army manpower crisis next month when temporary legislation under which the Army has been operating expires.

At the same time, this other legislation was advanced on Capitol Hill:

1. A Senate bill, giving midshipmen and cadets at the Military, Naval and Coast Guard academies a 20 per cent increase in pay, was passed by the House and sent to the President.

Would Aid Guard Here

2. The House passed a bill permitting war-service or temporary Civil Service employes, who have full-time jobs, to take military leave with pay. At present only permanent Federal employes of certain groups of the Army and Navy reserve components are allowed such leave. The present bill, which now goes to the Senate, applies to all classes of reservists. It is expected to aid the National Guard and Reserve recruiting programs here as many Government employes with war service are potentially affected.

3. Legislation transferring the Army Remount Service to the Department of Agriculture was passed by the House and sent to the Senate.

(4) The Senate passed a bill shutting off benefits of the GI bill of rights to those enlisting after August 31. The bill now goes to the House. No objection to the measure was voiced by the Army and Navy but the War Department asked authority to set up a substitute program of educational benefits as an enlistment inducement.

GI Benefits Extended

(5) The Senate approved another bill permitting men who served in the armed forces of an American ally during the past war to receive GI benefits from both the United States and the Allied government. Any benefits from the United States, however, would be reduced by the amount received from abroad.

The new Army enlistment system authorizes volunteers to be accepted for two, three, four, five or six-year terms. Non-coms of the top grades could be enlisted for indefinite periods, with the privilege of resigning at any time.

Present law, which expires June 30, permits enlistments for 18 months, two and three years. After that date, if the proposed legislation does not pass men can be accepted for the duration of the war plus six months only. War Department officials say their manpower plans will become unworkable under such a system.

As the Senate and House bill disagree in detail, the differences still must be ironed out.

Army Cancels 2d Lieutenant Marriage Ban

The Army has decided that the "holy bonds of matrimony" are good for young officers after all.

New regulations rescind a 10-year-old policy barring West Point graduates—and other newly appointed second lieutenants—from marrying for a year after getting peacetime commissions.

This will be good news for more than half of the men at the United States Military Academy and their girl friends. The wedding ban was suspended during the war and does not apply to the classes of '48 and '49—who entered before VJ-Day.

Began 10 Years Ago

But until yesterday's order, the classes of '50 and '51 were bound by the hard-hearted restriction.

When legislation authorizing the ban was advocated by Army graybeards a decade ago, they declared solemnly that bachelor "shavetails" could learn their jobs better than men with family responsibilities.

Forty-six-year-old Maj. Gen. Maxwell Taylor, present West Point superintendent, has a different view on this point than his predecessor—the then 63-year-old Maj. Gen. William D. Connor.

Taylor says the point never has been proven—and there's evidence the other way.

May Cut Fraulein-ization

Another reason for scrapping the prewar anti-Cupid policy is that West Pointers are sent to foreign duty for two to three years service about ten months after graduation. It should cut down fraternization, for it's the bachelors—not the bridegrooms—who go for the frauleins.

Moreover, a married second louie now gets $282 a month pay and allowances—roughly 100 bucks more than ten years ago. He can better afford a wife.

Will the West Pointers take advantage of the Army's friendly gesture to romance? Well, General Taylor says that one fifth of his plebes already have made "marriage commitments" for four years hence.

Fight for Voice Project Lost, Senators Say

The State Department has lost its fight to keep alive its full-scale overseas information program, Senate leaders were agreed yesterday.

The best the Department can hope for during this session of Congress is a comparatively small interim appropriation while Congress makes a thorough study of policy involved and an investigation of how the program should be conducted.

Congressional leaders told The Washington Post yesterday they fully realized this would mean that nearly all of the personnel of Assistant Secretary of State William Benton's Office of International Information and Cultural Affairs would be lopped from the payroll.

Republican leaders say they feel, however, it would be better to let the whole division go into a "state of suspended animation" and start afresh next January than to continue with the present personnel.

The Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday was reported to be considering a proposal to restore about six million dollars of the 31-million dollars the House dropped from the State Department information request for the next fiscal year.

If the Senate adopts this compromise proposal and it becomes part of the conference report made to both houses it will not be subject to the parliamentary point of order by which it was originally struck out of the House.

Army Warns Men on Reds

agrees with the party press, always supports policies of the Soviet Union, he is a Communist," says the War Department.

But, it adds, "we do not wish to begin a Communist 'witch hunt.' "Genuine liberals"—which "Commies hate"—must not be confused with these enemies of the United States, it stresses. Don't call anyone a Communist, says the Army, before applying the above test.

"Communism is the opposite of democracy" the pamphlet declares, warning that backers of the Red doctrine "seek downfall of the American system of government."

It tells of the beginnings of communism in Russia and the United States, and traces the checkered career of the American party during the war. Reciting how the group opposed United States preparedness until Hitler attacked Russia and then reversed itself, the Army adds:

"The party line still operates much the same way. For example, since President Truman recommended aid to Greece and Turkey some time ago, Communists have campaigned against the idea with every method available. They are against it because the Soviet Union is against it."

The War Department publication recites that Communists have infiltrated into Government positions and have been "particularly effective" in similar "boring from within" in labor unions.

Concluding, the pamphlet says: "The most effective defense against communism is a strong working democracy that preserves and guarantees the freedom expressed in our Constitution and laws."

Former Publisher Vandenberg Plagued by Proof-Reading

Senate President Arthur H. Vandenberg, who was once, as a publisher, a newspaperman himself in a sort of way, is now having newspaper trouble.

And he disclosed to the Washington Post that he is having exactly the same kind of newspaper trouble that the plain ordinary garden variety of reporter meets every day in the week.

In short, he's having editor trouble and proofreader trouble. It sounds familiar as he tells it.

"I am having trouble with a couple of vowels. That is the gist of it.

Loving on Living

"The United Nations Charter invites the membership of 'peace loving States.'

"For my own purposes of greater accuracy in respect to the world's needs, I have been trying for some time to change that phrase to 'peace living States.'

"Just one letter's difference! But do you think I can get away with it?

"No, sir! Friendly editors and scrupulous proofreaders constantly save me from misquoting the charter.

"In my recent statement regarding postwar aid, I tried again to substitute 'peace living' for peace loving.'

Papers Block Effort

"But I have yet to see a paper that let me get away with it.

"The fact remains that there is a tremendous difference between that 'i' and that 'o'.

"Indeed, it's pretty much the difference between success and failure for the United Nations. It's too bad the transition is so difficult."

Reporter's Note: Well, Senator, we've done our best. Let's see if we get away with it this time.

Globe Girdler Plans Flight Around Poles

Chicago, June 16 (AP).—Milton S. Reynolds, wealthy pen manufacturer who flew around the world in April, today announced plans for a globe-girdling flight around both poles "about August 1."

Reynolds said the new trip would not be non-stop, and that it would be "purely scientific." The plane, a converted B-32 bomber, will carry "10 or 12 scientists, and will be piloted by Capt. William Odom, skipper on the first trip. Reynolds said he did not plan to go along this time.

Reds Break Up Szabadsag Gathering

Szeged, Hungary, June 16 (AP).—Nearly 150 Communists, armed with weighted rubber hose, brass knuckles and hatchet-like Hungarian "fokos" broke up a Szabadsag (freedom) party meeting here today, which had been called expressly to determine whether there was freedom of speech and assembly in Hungary.

In a bloody brawl, during which approximately 700 resentful Hungarian men and women fought back with their fists and wooden chairs—and even pushed one Communist out of a second-floor window—an undetermined number of persons was injured.

There was one official report, however, that five Freedom Party supporters were sent to a hospital with serious head wounds from the heavy, long-handled "Fokos."

Thirty policemen who were assigned to watch the meeting, held in the scond-floor ballroom of the Tisza Hotel here, rushed in with rifles and broke up the fight—after it definitely had been won by the Freedom Party—and declared the meeting adjourned.

Then 500 policemen dispersed approximately 15,000 persons standing in the square facing the hotel.

World Bank Pledges Aid in Marshall Plan

Quebec, June 16 (AP).—John J. McCloy, president of the World Bank, tonight pledged its full co-operation in any economic revival plan European countries may draft in response to Secretary of State Marshall's suggestion.

The bank "is vitally interested in whatever can be done in Europe to bring forward a substantial plan on which further aid, particularly in the field of food and other basic living necessities, can be advanced by national governments," McCloy said.

"It is therefore not only prepared but eager to co-operate fully within its authorized scope in any constructive over-all plan that Europe may develop.

"If Europe can become better contained as to its basic needs, then the balance-of-payments situation will be vastly improved and a constructive economy rather than a continually subsidized one will be speeded."

McCloy's speech was prepared for the fifty-first annual convention of the New York State Bankers Association.

It was the first comment from International Bank or Fund officials on the Marshall proposal that the European nations get together on a coordinated reconstruction program that could use American financial assistance.

He hinted that the bank might go beyond its articles of agreement in the future to meet the demand of some member countries for funds to buy food and fuel.

"May I emphasize," McCloy said, "that the role of the International Bank is to make possible the reconstruction and development of productive facilities in war-devastated or under-developed member countries so that the people in those countries will be able to produce in their own areas. In this way, we can work toward correcting their present abnormal need to buy almost everything in the United States, and we can move toward the goal of reducing the present dollar shortages, restoring to those member countries some reasonable relationship between their exports and their imports. This will afford a sound basis for a steady and natural export and import trade in the United States and other member countries."

AB&W Drivers Reported Asking $1.50 an Hour

The A. B. & W. bus lines made another offer to union representatives yesterday as contract negotiations between company and bus operators got under way for the second time.

Company officials would not specify the terms of the offer. They said further negotiations probably will be held after the union has considered the proposal, but no date has been set.

The biggest issue at stake was reported to be a union wage increase demand for operators of more than a year's service from $1.15 to $1.50 an hour.

Negotiations broke down June 6 and resumed yesterday after the 10-day interval required by State law when no agreement is reached.

Congress Passes Bill Authorizing D. C. Water Sale

Falls Church could buy water from the District under a bill which cleared Congress yesterday.

Final action came with unanimous approval in the Senate of a bill passed earlier by the House. It now goes to the White House.

Besides Falls Church, the bill carries general authority to let the District sell water to other communities in the metropolitan area in Virginia.

Washington's Commissioners told Congress they had no objection to the bill. Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson also agreed, pointing out existing law lets the District sell water to Arlington, Montgomery and Prince Georges counties.

Debate Starts Tomorrow on World Police

Lake Success, L. I., June 16.—The problem of setting up an international police force, the last resort for United Nations maintenance of peace, will be brought out into open debate after 14 months of secret discussions, the Security Council decided yesterday.

A point-by-point consideration of the five-power military staff committee's divergent views on the question will be started at the next meeting of the council on Wednesday. The report is split on almost every major issue between the Soviet Union on the one hand and the United States, Great Britain, France and China on the other.

The council decided today to take up the differences itself in public session, after Alexandre Parodi of France, chairman of the council, told the delegates that the authority of the United Nations, and certainly of the Security Council, "may be shaken" if the 11-member group fails to obtain satisfactory results in establishing an international military force to police the world.

The way was left open, however, to send insoluble problems back to the military staff committee, when Andrei Gromyko of Russia disagreed with an interpretation from the chair which indicated to him that points of disagreement would be settled flatly by council vote.

The Soviet delegate said that if that were the case, it might well be that no final decisions would be taken on the most important points of the police force plan. His statement was a thinly disguised hint at the veto power.

Following this exchange, Parodi said that of course any material can be referred back to the military staff committee, which is a subsidiary body of the council, and that it was not necessary to decide on any hard and fast procedure at the present time.

Grandmothers Among Coeds At Maryland U. Rural Course

A new crop of coeds arrived yesterday at the University of Maryland to replace the vacationing teen-agers.

Among the 900 baggage-laden arrivals were four Anne Arundel County grandmothers all set for a week of instruction—and college hi-jinks—at the 21st annual Rural Women's Short Course.

For them it was a reunion. Last year the quartet had occupied adjoining dormitory rooms during the week-long course. This year they were next-door neighbors again.

After the first flush of mutual compliments about hats and figures, the women began to plot initiation "works" for the remainder of the Anne Arundel student delegation.

The returnees are Mrs. Emma H. Taylor, who attended her first course in 1926; Mrs. Harold C. Lang, completing her ninth course; Mrs. George Davis, two-year student, and Mrs. Frank Kramer, who is starting her sixth.

Last year, on the opening night of the course, "freshmen" were ordered to perform for the upperclassmen. While they did, their rooms were visited and their nylons—at that time more valuable than any 10 dresses—were confiscated.

This year the same thing is expected to happen, in addition to pillow fights, shortsheeting of beds, pajama parties and other initiation pranks, Mrs. Taylor disclosed.

The quartet of grandmothers who have a combined total of 13 grandchildren, including one who has attended the course in past years, are ardent supporters of the classes.

"One of the reasons we come is that we are free of our men," Mrs. Lang declared. "No dishwashing or cooking or worrying. We don't think about our families until Friday night."

"It's like a vacation," Mrs. Taylor agreed. "We don't write or call our families the whole week. We don't have to think about food and we love the lectures."

There was one complaint, however. Mrs. Lang noted that they have to "dress and dress." She admitted that putting on an evening gown for the reception to be given by University President H. C. Byrd tonight, "does a lot for the girls."

"For some, it is the only time they wear them the whole year," she explained, "and it's really a sight."

China Reds Attack Rail Lines Vital to Government Forces

Nanking, June 16 (AP).—Chinese Communists struck at many points in North China and Manchuria today, conocentrating on rail lines needed by hard-pressed government garrisons for supply and reinforcement.

Peiping and Tientsin were forced to resort to plane shuttle service after Communist raiders blew railway bridges between the two cities. A heavy Red attack was rolling south toward the Tientsin-Pukow railway linking the North China cities to Nanking.

Central News Agency said the situation was "confused" around Tsanghsien, an important town on this rail link 80 miles south of Tientsin. The Communists were believed massing for a blow at Tsanghsien after seizing a nearby town.

Chinese press dispatches said government defenders of Szepingkai, 70 miles southwest of the Manchurian capital of Changchun, repulsed an attempt by 3000 Communists to fight into the city behind a smoke screen.

U. N. Board Meets in Asia

Shanghai, June 16 (AP).—The first regional United Nations commission ever held in Asia opened today and elected a Chinese delegate as chairman over strenuous opposition from Russia.

Sixty delegates from 10 nations gathered for the opening meeting of the United Nations Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East.

Indian Delegate R. K. Nehru nominated Chinese Delegate T. F. Tsiang for the chairmanship and was seconded by Monnett B. Davis, United States delegate.

Alexander G. Stetsenko, speaking for the Russian delegation, which arrived late, objected, saying he did not know the candidate well enough to vote intelligently.

Tsiang finally was elected after some acrimonious exchanges in which Stetsenko once criticized "an apparent tendency of the commission to exclude the Soviet delegation from fully discussing the question of candidature."

Trade by Air On Increase In Washington

Foreign trade by air is growing increasingly important to Washington, figures released by the Census Bureau showed yesterday.

At the same time is was announced that the population of the metropolitan area is now about 1,200,000, a gain of 297,000, or about 33 per cent over the 907,816 population listed in 1940.

The Capital now ranks sixteenth among all American cities in imports by air, having surpassed Baltimore and Philadelphia. It is eighteenth on the list for air exports, ahead of Baltimore, Boston and Philadelphia.

In 1946 goods valued at $332,777 were exported from Washington by plane. Imports by air totaled $111,389. Baltimore exported $151,981 worth of goods by air and imported $30,748 in goods. Miami was the national leader in air exports with $53,011,676; while New York led in imports by air with $33,410,623.

Last April there were about 567,000 employed in the metropolitan area as against 401,445 in 1940. Unemployment has dropped to 20,000, or half of what it was in 1940.

These were among figures released by Census Director J. C. Capt at a luncheon of Sales Executives Club at the Mayflower.

Surprisingly enough, housing figures show the situation here to have eased since 1940. In the seven-year period, dwelling units increased by 99,000 or 39 per cent so that there are now five dwelling units for every 17 persons in the area while in 1940 there were five for every 18.

Other figures showed Washingtonians apparently are not as luxury minded as their fellow Americans in other cities.

Liquor Sales Decrease

Purchases from jewelry stores here during the first four months of this year was off 20 per cent compared to the same period last year. A drop of 13 per cent in such purchases was shown for the Nation as a whole. Liquor store sales declined 12 per cent here and 3 per cent in the rest of the Nation, and sales by eating and drinking places fell 8 per cent here and only 2 per cent throughout the country.

In building supplies, however, Washingtonians increased expenditures 47 per cent as compared with 20 per cent for the rest of the Nation. Slightly larger gains occurred here than in the Nation as a whole in food store, filling station and car dealer sales.

The District gained only 8 per cent in retail trade during the first four months of this year as compared with last year's figures and an 18 per cent gain shown in the rest of the Nation.

The proportion of managerial and professional workers in the Washington area has risen in the last seven years from 20 per cent of all employed in 1940 to 23 per cent this year. In the same period the proportion of service workers declined from 19 per cent to 16 per cent.

Drivers of Suspended Cabs Rush to Obtain New Insurance

An order suspending operation of 1716 District taxicabs carrying Keystone Mutual Casualty Company of Pittsburgh insurance became effective at midnight last night.

Most companies said last-minute insurance policy shopping had supplied them with additional coverage and that their operations would not be curtailed.

An earlier ruling, issued last Friday by the Virginia State Corporation Commission, suspended operations of at least 115 cabs in Alexandria and a number in Arlington. As in Washington, most have obtained other insurance.

The Virginia Commission order set a July 1 hearing date in Richmond.

The Maryland Public Service Commission ordered the company to write no new insurance or renew existing policies, but did not suspend cabs covered only by Mutual.

The orders went out in the face of a Pennsylvania insurance commission examination of the Pittsburgh company's books. A hearing has been set for June 25, a deputy insurance commissioner told The Post yesterday.

He added the company has "just been writing too much" business and said it had increased its premium writing "at least 100 per cent in the last year."

On June 1, District superintendent of insurance Albert F. Jordan cancelled authority of the company to conduct insurance business in Washington. He said "the financial status of Keystone Mutual Casualty Co. is not such as to comply with the laws of the District."

In Prince Georges County, Cab Inspector Harry G. Mercer said that about 98 per cent of the taxis carry Keystone insurance and that about 90 cabs are currently operating.

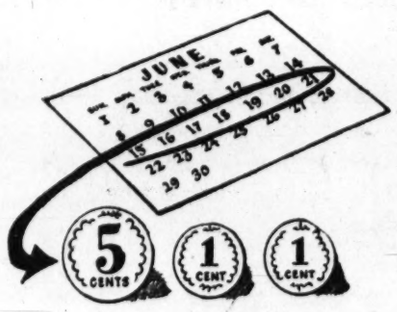
ABOUT THE PRICE OF MEAT



Less than 7c a week

This is what the meat packing industry's net earnings cost an average American family of four.

For this profit the meat industry—

Buys livestock and pays out millions of dollars daily for it.

Operates plants, machinery and equipment (employing over a quarter million people).

Prepares fresh meat, ham, bacon, sausage, canned meats, etc.

Delivers meat, under refrigeration, a few blocks or a thousand miles, to your store.

With all this service to you, the total net profits of the meat packing companies make no appreciable difference in the price you pay for a pound of meat.

Meat prices, whether up or down, are determined by competition. Just as the more than 4,000 separate meat packing companies compete with each other in buying livestock and selling meat . . . so millions of shoppers select meat daily from the available supply.

And at retail, meat cuts in large supply are priced below cuts in limited supply. The supply of one meat or another may change greatly from week to week or season to season. This results in meat prices going up or down.

Cadillac

THE SERIES SIXTY-TWO SEDAN

$2457.25

DELIVERED IN WASHINGTON, D. C.
Optional equipment, accessories, state and local taxes extra
Prices subject to change without notice

It may seem strange to you that we should feature Cadillac delivered prices at a time when we are many months behind in our deliveries. In the present distorted market, however, we believe it well for everyone to have a true perspective on intrinsic motor car value.

Events have proved that new Cadillac cars, being sold today through regular authorized Cadillac dealers, could command much higher prices based on scarcity alone. But it is Cadillac's desire that no one who wishes to own a new Cadillac car shall in any way be penalized. Not only in the price example given above, but throughout the entire line of Cadillac models, the factory-suggested, local, new-car delivered price is based on Cadillac quality at moderate cost—and not based on what the market will stand.

If you are among those who are now waiting for a new Cadillac, please be patient. We can assure you that the Cadillac factory will continue to bend every effort, consistent with Cadillac quality, to get your new car to you as soon as possible. When you do take delivery we know that you will feel well rewarded for your patience in waiting.

700 Ships Idle In 'Sit-Down' conducted as long as the men are on the ships.

Taylor, however, declared this use of the term "lockout" was "entirely erroneous" and added that "negotiations having been carried on and an agreement not having been reached, the union said 'no contract, no work.'"

The old agreement could have been extended temporarily under its terms, he said.

Seek Wage Increases

The 90,000-member NMU and the 15,000-member American Communications Association, another of the unions involved, are seeking wage increases and other benefits, but Curran asserted the operators have declined to engage in real bargaining.

He charged they were waiting for final action on the Taft-Hartley labor bill now on President Truman's desk.

Taylor contended that wages now paid American seamen are far above those of any other nation.

The other three unions involved are:

International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union (80,000—Has agreed to one-year contract extension but says it will support other unions without contracts. This is a West Coast union.

Marine Engineers Beneficial Association (15,000)—West Coast branch also has agreed to one-year contract extension. East Coast branch also has agreed to one-year contract extension. East Coast branch has been negotiating with operators unsuccessfully.

Marine Cooks and Stewards Union (2000)—Has been negotiating for contract extension but without result.

The Association of American Railroads said an embargo probably would be placed on rail freight consignments to U. S. flag ships if a definite stoppage materialized. Such an embargo was put into effect in the last great maritime strike last fall.

Questioned as to whether vessels with critical cargoes would be permitted to sail, Curran said the policy "at present, in the event of lockout or stoppage, is that there are no exemptions."

The NMU head said AFL maritime unions had agreed to cooperate with the CIO seamen. However, the U. S. Maritime Commission reported that AFL longshoremen in New York were working ships today.

Strike Poll in Baltimore

Baltimore, June 16 (AP).—A strike poll was being taken in the port of Baltimore today as approximately 3000 CIO seamen remained idle aboard ship in compliance with their leaders' directive not to sail without a contract.

John J. Smith, acting agent of the National Maritime Union, said the poll would be completed this week.

There are about 118 ships in port here now. Between 50 and 60 are American flag-vessels and are affected by the union policy of "no contract, no work."

Unaffected foreign-flag vessels total 43 and the remainder have non-CIO union or independent crews.

An official of the Steamship Trade Association said men aboard ships were still being fed, quartered and considered "technically still at work."

Smith's report indicated loading and unloading of ships in port today would proceed normally, with stevedores, longshoremen and other unionized waterfront workers unaffected by the stoppage for the present.

Peace Proposals Fail in St. Louis Transit Strike

St. Louis, June 16.—Two proposals to end a strike of streetcar and bus operators that has paralyzed public transportation in St. Louis for four days were rejected today by both union and Public Service Co. officials.

Police described traffic snarls resulting from increased use of private automobiles as the worst in the city's history.

The larger business establishments reported absenteeism close to normal, although some employes were late to work.

The company submitted at a meeting in City Hall a third proposal calling for a court test of the validity of a disputed wage arbitration award, which led to the walkout of 3500 operators, and providing for their return to work pending a decision.

Strike Idles 5500 Chrysler Workers

Detroit, June 16 (INS).—A strike idled more than 5500 Chrysler Corp. employes today, and striking Ford foremen threatened a national boycott of Ford products.

The walkout, in the Chrysler DeSoto plant, began Friday to protest a disciplinary three-day layoff given a worker on charges of careless handling of materials. The company closed the Wyoming plant final assembly line when 85 materials assembly department men stayed out today, idling 1800, and 675 others struck in sympathy.

Man Enlisted In Dutch Army Is Repatriated

An American who lost his citizenship when he enlisted in the Royal Netherlands army during World War II was repatriated here yesterday.

He is Bart John Shaw-Kennedy of Greenwich, Conn. He was given the oath by Justice James M. Proctor of District Court.

In another naturalization, Mrs. Joseph C. Satterthwaite of 2010 Kalorama rd. nw. was made a citizen. The wife of the State Department foreign service officer, she is the mother of a 4-month-old child.

Satterthwaite met his wife while he was assigned at Ankara, Turkey.

Mrs. Satterthwaite, who is a graduate of the American Women's College in Istanbul, was born in Russia, and later became a British citizen.

Mrs. Myrtis F. Watt, 1326 S. Quincy st., Arlington, was also naturalized. A British subject, she said she plans to return shortly to Europe for a visit.

The court was told the Justice Department requested the allowance of citizenship in the special ceremony so the applicants could apply for American passports to go overseas.

Maritime Strike Will Affect American Grain, Coal Exports

Loaded cars will start piling up at ports within a week, if the strike continues, just at a time when they are desperately needed in the harvest fields of the Southwest.

Although coal exports will be seriously cut, the strike will not hinder movement of coal to most ports for several weeks. Almost half of the Nation's coal exports clear through Hampton Roads, which has tremendous storage space and which also can accommodate 15,000 to 18,000 coal cars on its sidings.

How seriously oil shipments from Texas and other Gulf ports will be affected is still a question. Out of 501 ships in East Coast ports last night, 109 were Government-owned tankers, operated under Government Agency agreements. Most of these operators are big oil companies whose vessels are manned by members of company unions. It is believed that these will not be affected, at least for the time being.

How Long Are We Going To Be Suckers?

Says This Week's LIFE: "Anyone can get a new automobile simply by paying exorbitant prices"

Says REINES Motor Co.:

"Anyone tired of waiting for a NEW car can get a GOOD USED car at Reines Motor Co., without paying exorbitant "new" car prices!"

- LIFE calls it the "Used Car Racket." "Dusty" and Stanley Reines say it should be called the "NEW car racket!" Just because a car has 50 or 100 miles clocked on it doesn't make it a "USED" car. That's still a NEW car and you know it!
- Some people are tired of waiting and waiting for a new car. So they agree to pay up to double the price for a new car which has been driven around the block—and is now called a "Used" car. If they want to pay through the nose, that's their business!
- For purely selfish reasons the Reines Motor Co. refuses to adopt this "Public Be Damned" policy. "Dusty" and Stanley Reines expect to stay in this business a long time. And no one recommends a friend when he's been made a SUCKER!
- The Reines policy is to give a GOOD USED CAR fairly priced in today's market. That's all there is to it—no magic, no mumbo jumbo!
- That's why more and more satisfied customers are recommending their friends to Reines for a GOOD USED car!
- If you're still waiting for a new car, but would like to enjoy this summer in a car, SEE REINES FOR A GOOD USED CAR. You won't get something for nothing—you will be getting a GOOD used car fairly priced in today's market . . . that's all!
- Sorry, LIFE, anyone can be a sucker and pay up to double for a new car simply because someone tags it a "Used" car. Smart car buyers who are tired of waiting and tired of promises can get an honest-to-goodness GOOD used car now!

British Order Death to 3 Jews As U. N. Body Begins Study

Jerusalem, June 16 (AP).—A British military court sentenced three young Jews to death for terrorism today as the United Nations commission on Palestine began its task of finding a formula for bringing peace to the Holy Land.

The Jewish underground organization, Irgun Zvai Leumi, promptly appealed to the commission to intercede with the British on behalf of the condemned men.

It was presented a few minutes before the commission held a private session requested by Sir Henry Gurney, chief secretary of the Palestine government, as a means of presenting the government's statistical case to the United Nations. Tomorrow the Jewish agency will state its views.

The action of the military court and a peaceful general strike by 1,500,000 Arabs to underscore the decision of the Palestine Arab Higher Committee to boycott the 11-nation commission took the spotlight away from its opening session.

The court sentenced the three Jews to death and two others to life sentences on charges they took part in the daring prison break at Acre on May 4 in which 251 prisoners escaped and 16 persons were killed. All five were alleged Irgun members.

Chairman Emil Sandstroem of Sweden, asked earlier what the commission would do if such a plea were presented, answered, "We have not treated this question." He added that the commission had no power to grant immunity to anyone giving testimony to the U. N. group.

[Sandstroem broadcast a five-minute appeal to the Arabs to abandon their boycott of the U.N. investigation, the New York Herald Tribune reported in a dispatch from its Jerusalem correspondent. —Editor's note.]

Justice Halts Explanation

tee was licensed by the President's War Relief Control Board. Frequent examinations were made by the Treasury, the statement declared.

Helen R. Bryan, executive secretary, was afraid the House committee "was trying to help the supporters of Franco" and, therefore, refused to turn over the books when a subpena was issued.

Miss Bryan also feared that "any employe of the Federal Government whose name appeared as a contributor" would be in "jeopardy of losing his job." It would also jeopardize persons inside Spain whose relatives were receiving refugee relief, he declared.

"It is unfortunate that we think in terms of fascism as on the right and communism as on the left," he said, "for this puts democracy in the middle, and everyone who fights fascism is accused of being pro-Communist.

Attacker Type of Thinking

"I'd rather we thought in terms of statism on the one hand, under which we could classify both fascism and communism." On the other side would be "individualism and the dignity of the individual . . . plus civil liberties, which is democracy.

"With such a type of thinking, one could attack fascism and still be regared . . . as being in favor of democracy."

The FBI has called the Refugee Committee a "Communist Front."

Pilot Changed Course Before Plane Crash

The pilot of the DC-4 which crashed near Leesburg, Va., Friday night and carried 50 persons to their deaths had changed his course to avoid being "stacked up" for an hour outside National Airport.

This was disclosed yesterday by Civil Aeronautics Board Chairman James M. Landis as the bodies of 12 crash victims—10 of them still unidentified—were laid to rest in a common grave in the cemetery at Leesburg.

Landis, who will meet today with four other members of a special air safety board created Sunday by President Truman, recounted this log of the last minutes of the ill-fated Capital-Pennsylvania Central airliner to a news conference:

At 6:53 p. m. (EDT), Capt. Horace Stark, the pilot, reported he was over the Flintstone intersection (a radio marker 88 miles southeast of Pittsburg flying at 7000 feet.

Airport Congested

One minute later Airways Traffic Control (ATC) at National Airport cleared him to proceed to the Herndon marker (a radio marker familiar to all airline pilots in this section) where he was to "hold" until given clearance into the field. ATC further advised the pilot that because of traffic congestion at National Airport he could not expect clearance into the field before 7:30 p. m. (EDT).

At that time the ceiling in Washington was 700 feet and visibility was 4 miles. Over Martinsburg, W. Va., about that time, the ceiling was 2500 feet and visibility 5 miles.

Captain Stark acknowledged the message about proceeding to Herndon, but three minutes later asked if he could come in "on contact" (within sight of the ground) on the right hand side of the Arcola Range.

(The Arcola Range is fairly new and parallels the Herndon Range about 10 miles to the south. It was installed to relieve traffic congestion at National Airport.)

At 7 p. m. (EDT), ATC replied that the pilot had permission to use the Arcola Range if he could fly "contact" at 2500 feet or less, adding that he was cleared to come straight into the airport if he could do that.

Instructions Acknowledged

Captain Stark acknowledged these instructions at 7:03 p. m. (EDT) and acknowledged again when he was told to report every time he dropped from each 1000-foot level.

The pilot reported at 7:05 p. m. (EDT) that he was leaving 7000 feet. Two minutes later he reported leaving 6000 feet, and at 7:08 p. m. (EDT) reported being over Martinsburg, W. Va. Almost immediately afterward he radioed he was leaving 5000 feet. At 6:10 p. m. (EDT) he reported leaving 4000 feet and at 6:13 p. m. (EDT) reported leaving 3000 feet.

At 6:19 p. m. (EDT) the Washington tower called and asked for information. There was no reply. Investigators have tentatively set the time of the crash at 6:16 p. m. (EDT.).

Landis told newsmen that CAB inspectors who examined the wreckage of the DC-4 found no evidence of mechanical failure or structural defect.

He said it was simply a "hypothesis" that the pilot, after getting permission from ATC to come in "under the weather," had miscalculated his position during the descent from 7000 feet. He added that blame could not definitely be fixed on the pilot at this time.

The airliner crashed at a point about 1500 feet above sea level and 150 feet below the crest of the mountain, the CAB chief said.

Preliminary investigation, he said, showed the plane was in normal flying position with power on when it struck.

All control surfaces have been accounted for and there is no indication that anything dropped off the plane before it struck.

Landis is chairman of a special board appointed by President Truman to seek the answer to safer air transportation. The committee will hold its first meeting at 2:30 p. m. in Landis' office.

Other members of the committee are Brig. Gen. Milton W. Arnold (retired), vice president of the Air Transport Association; Dr. Jerome C. Hunsaker, chairman of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics; T. P. Wright, Civil Aeronautics administrator, and Capt. H. B. Cox, veteran American Airlines pilot.

Meanwhile, the third major airline disaster in the East in less than a month caused repercussions in Congress.

Representative George H. Bender (R., Ohio) accused the CAA of "dilatory management" and introduced a bill which would require the CAA to install radar altimeter equipment in all commercial transport planes. The husband of Bender's secretary was one of those killed in last Friday's crash.

Representative Fred L. Crawford (R., Mich.) said on the House floor that the accidents were "a great deal due to bad personnel."

Investigations were promised by Representative Charles A. Wolverton (R., N. J.), chairman of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, and Representative Carl Hinshaw (R., Calif.), chairman of the House Aviation Subcommittee.

Virginia Crash Victims Rest in Common Grave

Port Deposit Crash Probe Stories Differ

Bainbridge, Md., June 16 (AP).—The last airborne moments of an Eastern Airlines plane which carried 53 persons to their death in a woods near Port Deposit, Md., May 30 were described today to the Civil Aeronautics Board by eyewitnesses who differed on details.

The majority said fragments came off the plane as it plunged into the fatal dive. Others said they observed no disintegration while the big DC-4 transport was still in flight.

Robert W. Chrisp, presiding CAB officer, adjourned the public hearing until an unspecified date, when it will be resumed in New York for presentation of expert testimony.

Chrisp said later it "seems definite" a structural defect in the reconverted Army transport was to blame for the disaster, worst in the history of United States commercial aviation.

Witnesses who declared they saw chunks fly off the airliner before it crashed included C. S. Keller and his son, Russell; Ferdinand Grove, jr., Edwin E. Ennis, all of the Port Deposit area, and Chief Boatswain's Mate W. C. Gorham and Seaman First Class Frank Welch of the Naval Training Center.

All placed the area of disintegration in the tail assembly.

Two other Port Deposit area residents, Albert Cresswell and his son, Edward, testified they saw no parts come off the plane.

Chrisp said tests on fragments were still under way at the United States Bureau of Standards in Washington and the Douglas Aircraft plant at Santa Monica, Calif. Douglas manufatured the ill-fated craft.

C. J. Hein, a Douglas representative, said tests at the plant were geared to simulate the actual flight conditions of the airliner wrecked on a Newark-Miami nonstop trip.

$9975 Airport Chief Resigns For $18,000 La Guardia Post

Griffin Law

Harvey F. Law has resigned his $9975 Civil Service job as administrator of the National Airport to become superintendent of airports for metropolitan New York at almost double his Washington salary.

His successor will be Bennett H. Griffin, director of the aeronautical center maintained in Oklahoma City by the CAA for training inspectors. He is a pioneer with 25 years' experience in airport operation.

Law's new position is described as the world's biggest airport job. Under the Port of New York Authority, he will supervise LaGuardia, Idlewild and Floyd Bennett airfields, and within a short time, Newark Airport as well.

Chairman Howard S. Cullman of the Port Authority, who called Law "the country's outstanding air port manager," said that as manager of the Washington National Airport, "he was able to prove that an airport can be self-supporting."

He will receive $18,000 a year in his new position.

Law told The Post yesterday the increased salary was a factor in his acceptance of the New York job, though not the major one. He had been offered the post last October, he said, and had turned it down, but the Port Authority had been "pressing him hard" since June, when the agency began to take over the metropolitan airports.

Law, who has managed the airport here since September, 1943, has been living in Vienna, Va., with his wife and three children. Last year Law won the Haire award for the best operated airport in the United States.

His Washington Airport salary is the top allowed by Civil Service under present regulations.

Griffin, his successor, who is 51, first became a pilot in 1917 with the U. S. Army Air Corps in France and Italy. He had established the CAA center for inspector training at Houston in 1941, and returned after more than three years of military service to supervise its transfer to Oklahoma and resume its direction.

Griffin joined the CAA in 1933 as aeronautical inspector and became chief of the inspection standards section, which led to his present directorship of the center. During World War II, he set up the training of Army Air Transport crews who did much of the flying over the "hump" between India and China, and later became an air inspector dealing with operational problems. He received the Air Medal, Legion of Merit and a presidential citation. He was discharged as colonel.

The administrator and Mrs. Griffin will live at 2000 Connecticut ave. nw., where they have maintained a home for several years.

Mass Burial Held in Va. for 12 Air Victims

The bodies of 12 of the 50 persons who died Friday night when a big DC-4 crashed into a mountainside were buried in a common grave at the cemetery in Leesburg, Va., yesterday.

Ten of the victims were placed in the grave unidentified.

Nearly 200 persons, including relatives of the victims, stood by with heads bowed as a Catholic priest and four Protestant ministers read brief burial services.

Huge wreaths of flowers were banked around the 20-by-20-foot grave.

Two Identified Buried

The two identified victims who were buried with the nameless were Miss Minnie Harman, 50, a Red Cross worker, of 1727 Massachusetts ave. nw., and John R. Dewar of Ambridge, Pa.

Dewar was buried at Leesburg because his wife's body was one of the 10 not identified. Their children did not want to separate them.

Three Washington area residents whose bodies were not identified were laid to rest in the common grave.

They were Charles H. McCafferty, 51, of 2704 Allison st., Mount Rainier Md.; P. J. Ness, 50, of 3500 14th st. nw., and Mrs. Dorothy Peters De Cray, State Department employe.

Here in the Washington area services were held yesterday for one of the victims, David P. Godwin, chif of fire control for the U. S. Forest Service. Services for three others will be held today and services for one have been scheduled tomorrow.

Services for Mr. Godwin, whose home was at 1407 31st st. nw., were held at Christ Church, 31st and O sts. nw. The body was sent to Charleston, S.C., for burial.

It was announced here yesterday that service for Miss Mary Jane Altman, 24, of Uniontown, Pa., will be held today at Uniontown. Miss Altman enlisted in the Waves during the war and was stationed here in the Office of Naval Operations. At the time of the crash, she was en route to Washington to visit the aunt of her fiance.

Funeral Services Today

Funeral services will be held today for Capt. Horace Stark, 46, of 4507 Four Mile Run dr., Arlington, Va., pilot of the plane; Allen C. Coe of 3435 8th st. S., Arlington, and Dr. Courtney M. Smith, Red Cross medical director, of 9901 Edgehill la., Silver Spring.

Services will be held at 7:30 p. m. at the Ives funeral home, 2847 Wilson blvd., Arlington, for Captain Stark. Burial will be private.

The services for Mr. Coe will be at 2 p. m. in Gawler's Chapel, 1756 Pennsylvania ave. nw., and burial will be private.

Final rites for Dr. Smith will be held at 3:30 p. m. at the Warner E. Pumphrey funeral home, 8434 Georgia ave., Silver Spring. Burial will be private.

Funeral services for James E. Terry, who was listed from Long Beach, Calif., in the passenger list released by Capital-PCA Airlines, are to be held here tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. at Chambers funeral home, 517 11th st. se. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

House Stands Fast on Wool Protection Bill

By The Associated Press

Adamant in the face of an anticipated presidential veto, the House indorsed anew yesterday a policy of protection for American wool producers from foreign competition despite declarations that the step may scuttle the Geneva trade conference.

It approved a bill pegging wool support prices at their present level and empowering the Chief Executive to fix quotas on wool imports or boost the tariff if and when he finds foreign wool is interfering with domestic prices.

The decision was by voice vote only a few minutes after the House, on a roll call tally, voted 191 to 166, against sending the bill back to a joint House-Senate conference committee for further study.

Voting against the motion to send the bill back to conference committee were 154 Republicans and 37 Democrats. For recommittal were 46 Republicans, 119 Democrats, and Representative Marcantonio of New York, only member of the American Labor Party in Congress.

Bill Goes to Senate

The measure will be shunted now to the Seante for probable approval and then onto President Truman's desk.

The final form of the measure is the product of a joint Senate-House committee appointed to reconcile differences between the two chambers.

As originally passed by the Senate, the measure did not contain the quota-tariff provisions which Administration spokesmen—among them Secretary of State Marshall, Undersecretary of State Will Clayton, Henry L. Stimson and Cordell Hull—have protested as endangering world trade.

The vote came after Representative Cooley (D., N. C.) carrying the ball for the Administration on the House floor, asserted that its approval would be a sign to the world that the United States is returning to a policy of "economic isolationism."

Hope Defends Measure

But Chairman Hope (R., Kan.) of the House Agriculture Committee, declared that "wool is a strategic material . . . In the present state of international affairs, it is essential that we maintain a domestic wool industry."

"Even with price supports," he said, "it has been declining. This legislation . . . merely seeks to bridge the present emergency, due in main to stock accumulations during the war. There has been no wool market since April 15."

Concern in Australia and New Zealand, in particular, over the possibility the United States will boost the present tariff of 34 cents a clean pound has brought about a reported stalemate of the multilateral trade conference at Geneva.

WCTU Holds Convention Here

In 2-inch-high letters outside the Francis Asbury Methodist Church, the sign said:

"Alcohol kills everything that lives—preserves everything that is dead."

In the church basement at 3146 16th st. nw., the District of Columbia WCTU held its annual convention banquet.

The beverages: Water, tea, coffee and milk.

The convention: The seventy-third annual assembly of one of the District's oldest temperance organizations, was opened at 10 a. m. yesterday in the church's main auditorium.

Present were nearly 100 women from 28 District chapters.

For nearly seven hours, they worshiped, offered pledges to the Christian and American flag, heard reports and pep talks in which alcohol was condemned.

"The liquor industry itself," declared Mrs. Caroline E. Coates, 109 Maple ave., Takoma Park, the president, "is creating the sentiment for prohibition—by trying to grab every dollar it can."

Mrs. Coates, up for reelection without opposition, has been a WCTU-er since she was 9.

The organization has about 1600 active members in the District

Army Warns Of Mississippi Flood Danger

Quincy, Ill., June 16 (AP).—Army engineers warned today that a major flood was developing along a 100-mile stretch of the central Mississippi River and advised that several hundred residents of the area be evacuated.

They reported that a flood equaling that of last week was due along the levees of the Sny drainage district on Wednesday. The danger area extends from Keokuk, Iowa, to Clarksville, Mo.

The situation had eased somewhat in Nebraska and Iowa, especially along the Des Moines River near Ottumwa. Flood waters were receding slowly from Ottumwa, where 10,000 had been forced to flee from their homes when the Des Moines River surged into 25 per cent of the city.

The river crested at 16.5 feet last week.

The Mississippi was at a stage of 18.8 feet here today, a rise of about .2 feet in four hours. The expected crest is 24.5 feet.

VFW Asks U. S. to Deny Jobs To Clerk Members of UPW

Resolutions asking that membership in the United Public Workers of America be considered grounds for denial of Federal employment, and others aimed at curtailing alleged Communist influence in the United States, were adopted at the District Veterans of Foreign Wars encampment last night in the Hotel Mayflower.

Other resolutions proposed that Governors of States which have not outlawed the Communist Party be petitioned to do so, and that the national department of the VFW be memorialized to institute legal proceedings to enjoin publication and distribution of the New York Communist organ, the Daily Worker.

That a system of examinations be established by legislation for employment in the Central Intelligence Group and that more information on present immigration into the United States be made public and the border patrol strengthened was proposed in still other resolutions.

Brig. Gen. Gordon C. Young, District of Columbia Commissioner; Chester F. Naumowicz, manager of the Veterans' Administration Washington regional office, and Adelbert W. Lee of the District Board of Education spoke briefly.

More than 170 ladies attended the opening session of the two-day encampment of the Ladies Auxiliary last night in the Hamilton Hotel. A luncheon will be held at 12:30 p. m. today at 2400 16th st. nw.,

Star Route Mailmen May Have to Take Exam

Legislation requiring most star route mail carriers to qualify under Civil Service was passed by the Senate yesterday and sent to the House.

Star route delivery is the classification of mail service to towns to which rail service is not available. At present it is operated under a system of contract bidding.

Tardy Lawyer Draws Fine

Twelve minutes tardiness yesterday caused Attorney John G. Saul a $10 fine and a contempt-of-court citation in District Court.

Saul, who was defending a housebreaking case before Justice Alexander Holtzoff, left the courtroom during a 10-minute recess called by the Justice. When court resumed, everybody was there but Saul. He showed up 12 minutes later and bowed slightly to Justice Holtzoff's grimace.

"What do you have to say, Mr. Saul?" the Justice asked.

"Well, your honor, the bondsman was talking about, with Molenoff, and they're going to send the man back——"

"I'm not interested in that," pressed the justice.

"That is true, your honor, but I was investigating——"

"Oh, no, oh, no," insisted Justice Holtzoff.

Then he accused Saul of disrespect, of contempt, of tardiness, of lack of courtesy and imposed the fine.

After the courthouse closed, Saul told reporters: "I will not take this case to the Supreme Court. I will pay the fine cheerfully."

Editorial Reaction Varies On Truman Veto of Tax Bill

By The Associated Press

President Truman's veto yesterday of the tax reduction bill was criticized sharply by some newspapers which accused him of "partisan politics," while others commended his action and praised him for "high and courageous leadership."

Typical of the sharp division of editorial reaction to the President's veto were the comments of the NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN and the NEW YORK SUN.

The TENNESSEAN described Mr. Truman's action as "praiseworthy not only for its patriotic courage and political insight, but also for the sound economic reasons behind it."

The SUN assailed the President and said by his veto he had "made his choice between petty partisan politics on one hand and, on the other, the butcher's bill and the grocery bill of every worker for wages or salary in the United States. He plumped for partisan advantage."

Other Editorial Comment

Other editorial comment on the veto included:

ATLANTA CONSTITUTION—"It is distressing and disappointing that a way can not be found to reduce taxes after so grievous and expensive war. But until a better and a fairer tax bill is presented, we believe . . . the President to have acted wisely in vetoing this one."

BALTIMORE SUN—"No argument, however beautifully phrased, can alter the fact that Mr. Truman insists upon taking more of your money than the Government needs because he believes the Government knows better what to do with your money than you do."

BUFFALO COURIER EXPRESS—". . . it took courage to do what Mr. Truman did . . . whether the President's judgment was equal to his courage is a subject for fiscal experts to debate."

KANSAS CITY STAR—"The whole argument in support of this veto is fallacious. It is contended that current revenues do not permit both tax relief and payments on the debt and that all current Treasury surpluses should go for the latter. Yet payments on the debt are quite possible and are being made, with adequate funds left for tax relief as well."

"Hazarded Political Fortune"

PORTLAND OREGONIAN—"We think that men and women throughout the Nation had been counting on tax relief in a period when income seems increasingly inadequate to meet the costs of living. They had it coming."

OREGON JOURNAL—"He hazarded his political fortune besides exercising courage of a high order. President Truman's veto . . . is a declaration for responsible government. He has the better of the argument and the future will verify the soundness of his judgment."

MILWAUKEE JOURNAL—"Congress should pass the tax reduction measure over the President's veto . . . for the very important reason that not to enact the bill at this juncture might have a serious effect on the national economy."

NEW YORK DAILY NEWS—"Our hunch is that Mr. Truman feels there is one more presidential election victory in the New Dealers' 'spend and spend, tax and tax, elect and elect' principle. It will be most interesting to see whether the voters will fall for that any more."

MEMPHIS COMMERCIAL APPEAL—"All in all it seems to us that the veto was prompted far more by political gambling than by sound fiscal policy."

NEWARK STAR-LEDGER—"In spite of the accusations of political expediency which his congressional critics are making, any housewife who has ever managed a budget will understand that President Truman is on sound ground in his veto of the tax reduction bill."

RICHMOND TIMES-DISPATCH—"Whatever the politics of the matter, Mr. Truman's position happens to be the sound one . . . it is more important to bring about a substantial cut in the debt than to slash taxes."

CLEVELAND PLAIN DEALER—"With a large number of citizens genuinely needing tax relief in order to balance their family budgets, there is little ground for fearing that their tax savings would be spent extravagantly or would in any wise aggravate the forces of inflation."

PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER—"President Truman's veto of tax relief is a sharp reminder to the American people that they are still living under the New Deal."

Tax Veto Message Text

President Truman's veto message on the tax reduction bill follows:

TO THE House of Representatives:

I return herewith, without my approval, H. R. 1, entitled: "An Act to Reduce Individual Income Tax Payments."

The right kind of tax reduction, at the right time, is an objective to which I am deeply committed. But I have reached the conclusion that this bill represents the wrong kind of tax reduction, at the wrong time. It offers dubious, ill-apportioned, and risky benefits at the expense of a sound tax policy and is, from the standpoint of Government finances, unsafe. Proposals for tax reduction must be examined in the light of sound and carefully related fiscal and economic policies. Unless they are consistent with the demands of such policies, they should not be approved.

In my budget message of January 10, 1947, I said:

"As long as business, employment, and national income continue high, we should maintain tax revenues at levels that will not only meet current expenditures but also leave a surplus for retirement of the public debt. There is no justification now for tax reduction."

Developments since January do not warrant a change in that conclusion. Total employment in May increased by a million and a half over that in April, and the total number now employed is over 58 million. The number of unemployed is now less than two million, practically a peacetime minimum. Income payments to individuals are estimated to be at the record annual rate of 176 billion dollars. Department store sales in May were up 6 per cent over April, and equalled the all-time high in dollar volume. The number of houses begun by private enterprise in May was the largest in any month since VJ-Day. Despite many gloomy predictions, there is no convincing evidence that a recession is imminent.

AMPLE evidence points to the continuation of inflationary pressures. Tax reduction now would increase them. If these pressures are long continued, and if essential readjustments within the price structure are long deferred, we are likely to induce the very recession we seek to avoid.

Reductions in income tax rates are not required now to permit necessary investment and business expansion. There is no shortage of funds for this purpose in any wide sector of our economy. As a matter of fact, the amount of liquid funds in the hands of corporations and individuals at the present time is nearly 200 billion dollars. Under these circumstances, tax reduction is no tnow needed to provide additional funds for business expansion.

The argument is made that the funds added to consumer purchasing power through this tax reduction are needed to maintain employment and production at maximum levels.

It is true, as I have pointed out many times, that the purchasing power of large groups of our people has been seriously reduced. We must take every step possible to remedy the disparity between prices and the incomes of the rank and file of our people, so as not to put brakes in our continued prosperity and lead us toward a recession. Tax reduction as proposed in H. R. 1 is not the proper way to remedy the current price situation and its effect upon consumers and upon prospective employment. Necessary adjustments in incomes, production, and prices should be made by wise policies and improved practices of business and labor, not by hastily invoking the fiscal powers of government on a broad scale.

THE time for tax reduction will come when general inflationary pressures have ceased and the structure of prices is on a more stable basis than now prevails. How long it will take for this point to be reached is impossible to predict. Clearly, it has not been reached as yet. Tax reduction now would add to, rather than correct, maladjustments in the economic structure.

Sound fiscal policy also requires that existing tax rates be maintained for the present. I have always been keenly aware of the necessity for the utmost economy in Government and of the need for a progressive reduction in Government expenditures to the greatest extent possible consistent with out national interests. However, necessary expenditures for essential Government operations are still high. We are still meeting heavy obligations growing out of the war. We continue to be confronted with great relief and rehabilitation that have an important bearing on our efforts to secure lasting peace. We are still in a transition period in which many uncertainties continue. In the face of these facts, common prudence demands a realistic and conservative management of the fiscal affairs of the Government.

A time of high employment and high prices, wages, and profits. Suchas the present, calls for a surplus in Government revenue over expenditures and the application of all or much of this surplus to the reduction of the public debt. Continuing public confidence in Government finances depends upon such a policy. If the Government does not reduce the public debt during the most active and inflationary periods, there is little prospect of material reduction at any time, and the country would, as a result, be in a poorer position to extend supports to the economy should a subsequent deflationary period develop.

WITH the present huge public debt, it is of first importance that every effort now be made to reduce the debt as much as possible. If H. R. 1 were to become law, the amount available for debt retirement would be entirely too low for this period of unparalleled high levels of peacetime income and employment.

The integrity of the public debt is the financial bedrock on which our national eceonomy rests. More than half of the American people are direct owners of Government securities. A major portion of the assets of banks, insurance companies, and trust funds is invested in Government bonds. To maintain the integrity of the public debt, we must now reduce it by substantial amounts.

In addition to the fact that this is not the time for tax reduction, there is a fundamental objection to this particular bill. An adjustment of the tax system should provide fair and equitable relief for individuals from the present tax burden, but the reductions proposed in H. R. 1 are neither fair nor equitable. H. R. 1 reduces taxes in the high income brackets to a grossly disproportionate extent as compared to the reduction in the low income brackets. A good tax reduction bill would give a greater proportion of relief to the low income group.

H. R. 1 failes to give relief where it is needed most. Under H. R. 1, tax savings to the average family with an income of $2500 would be less than $30, while taxes on an income of $50,000 would be reduced by nearly $5000, and on an income of $500,00 by nearly $60,000.

INSOFAR as "take-home" pay is concerned under H. R. 1, the family earning $2500 would receive an increase of only 1.2 per cent; the family with an income of $50,000 would receive an increase of 18.6 per cent, and the family with an income of $500,000 would receive an increase of 62.3 per cent.

If H. R. 1 were to become law, the inequity of its provisions would be frozen into the tax structure. The reduction in Government receipts resulting from this bill would be such that the Government could ill afford to make fair tax reductions at the proper time in the form of a carefully considered revision of our entire tax structure.

Now is the time to plan for a thoroughgoing revision of the tax system. We should consider not only individual income tax rates but also the level of personal exemptions and many other adjustments in the personal income tax structure. We should also consider changes in excise tax laws, gift and estate taxes, corporation taxes, and, in fact, the entire field of tax revenues. Such a program of tax adjustment and tax reduction should be geared to the financial and economic needs of this country. It will be an important contribution to economic progress. The timing of such a program is highly important to achieve economic stability. To promote the investment of capital and to maintain employment, purchasing power and high levels of production.

For the compelling reasons I have set forth, I return H. R. 1 without my approval.

HARRY S. TRUMAN.

GOP Girds For Tax Fight

Mr. Truman continued to argue there is no basis for tax reduction as long as business, employment and national income remain high. He said the times call for tax levels that will build up a Government surplus and "all or much" of this surplus should be applied to the national debt. Despite gloomy forecasts, he said there is no convincing evidence of an early recession.

He opposed the so-called Knutson bill on these other grounds:

1. Tax reduction now would increase the very inflationary pressures that threaten an ultimate recession.

2. Business now has ample funds for expansion and no tax-cut stimulus to investment is needed.

3. Price rises have reduced the purchasing power of large groups of people, but the Knutson bill isn't the answer.

4. Expenditures for essential Government operations in this transition period are still necessarily high. Funds for foreign relief and other international obligations are important to our efforts for lasting peace.

5. The Government must reduce the debt during unparalleled heights of income and employment, or there is little prospect of material reduction at any time.

6. The Knutson bill cuts are "neither fair nor equitable." The bill disproportionately reduces taxes on high incomes . . . "a good tax reduction bill would give a greater proportion of relief to the low income group."

Pointing up his last objection, the President said a $2500 family would receive only a 1.2 per cent increase in "take home" pay under the bill. In contrast, he said a $50,000 family would receive an 18.6 per cent increase and a $500,000 family would net a 62.3 per cent gain.

Thorough Revision Proposed

In lieu of "freezing" such provisions into the tax structure, the President proposed a thoroughgoing revision of the entire tax structure, geared to the financial and economic needs of the country. (The House Ways and Means Committee is already embarked on an over-all tax study.) Mr. Truman, however, set no date for a general tax overhaul.

From House Speaker Joseph W. Martin (R., Mass.) to Senate GOP Steersman Robert A. Taft (Ohio), Republican leaders slapped back as a unit, calling on Congress to override the veto.

Taft accused the President of making a "demagogic appeal" to the low-income groups. He said Mr. Truman's theory if logically followed through "would equalize all incomes down to a flat level."

Taft answered the President's "wrong time" line with this sally: "Apparently the only 'right time' for tax reduction is in an election year."

Martin said the President is continuing "the old New Deal policy of 'tax and tax, spend and spend,'" adding: "If a business recession comes the responsibility will rest directly upon the White House."

House Ways and Means Chairman Harold Knutson (R., Minn.) charges the President with playing "cold blooded politics."

House Majority Leader Halleck termed the veto "a flagrant abuse of the executive power." He said the President proposed "that the White House, and not Congress, . . . control the Nation's purse."

House Majority Whip Leslie C. Arends (R., Ill.) predicted the House will override the President's veto."

House Minority Whip John W. McCormack (D., Mass.), however, said "the chances are very good that the veto will be sustained by the House."

Democrats Rally to Defense

McCormack said Democratic leaders generally rallied to the President's defense.

Senate Minority Whip Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) said the President was justified in vetoing a tax cut "in a time of world uncertainty."

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) said: "Obviously we can't reduce taxes until we know how much must be appropriated."

Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.) who voted for the tax cut, told the President he would not vote to override "because the President is in the best position to know the state of our finances."

Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.), who voted aaginst the tax cut, declined to comment.

It was reported, however, that Byrd and some other Democrats who think the Administration needs a prod to start cutting spending, may vote to override.

Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.), who also opposed the tax bill on the first round, said he, too, may shift to an overriding veto, but for a different reason. He said tax-making is a congressional function and he regarded the veto as "political."

The House ran up far better than a two-thirds majority on final clearance of the tax conference report, voting 220 to 99.

The Senate twice lacked a two-thirds majority, originally passing the bill, 52 to 34, and later approving the conference report, 48 to 28.

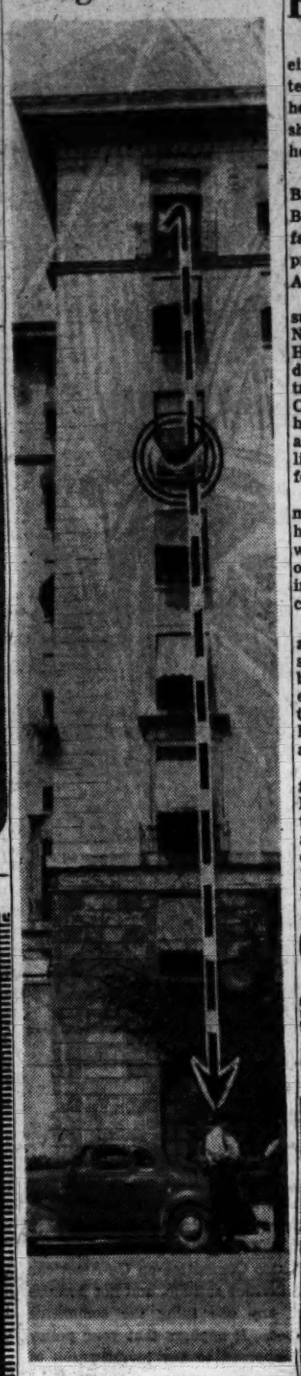
Where Woman Plunged to Death



Harris & Ewing

DESPITE SON'S EFFORT to save her, Mrs. Helen Burlage, 45, fell to her death from the eighth floor balcony of the Jefferson Hotel, at 16th and M sts. nw., yesterday. Her fall was broken by an awning on the sixth floor (in circle)

20 Killed, 46 Injured

Buenos Aires, June 16 (AP).—At least 20 persons were killed and 46 were injured seriously in Corrientes Province last night when a train hit a cow on the track.

Woman Suicide Fights Off Son

A 45-year-old woman leaped eight floors to her death here yesterday, slipping from the grasp of her son, who, trying to save her, shouted for help to horrified but helpless persons below.

The woman was Mrs. Helen P. Berlage, 45, wife of Thomas N. Berlage, owner of a 200-acre dairy farm near Olney, Md. She was pronounced a suicide by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald.

Her husband had reserved the suite for her and the son, Thomas N., jr., at the Jefferson Apartment Hotel, 1200 16th st. nw., on Saturday, so she could obtain medical treatment in town, according to Charles S. Austin, manager. She had been ill since an operation about Easter, her husband told police, and had been quite nervous for the past month.

The son told police that his mother, who had been ordered by her doctor to stay in bed, got up without warning, went to the window, and climbed over an iron railing which formed a narrow balcony.

Though able to grasp his mother around the waist, the son said, she struggled free. He seized her wrist but was unable to hold her. Several spectators on 16th st. heard the son, Thomas, jr., 23, calling for help and one pulled the fire alarm at the 16th and M sts. box.

Besides Thomas, jr., an engineer for Pratt & Whitney Aircraft in Hartford, Conn., Mrs. Berlage had three other children, Patricia, 20, a student at Hollins College, Roanoke, Va.; Beverly, 14, and Bruce, 12, both students at Sherwood High School, Sandy Spring, Md.

Family Stock Deals to Cut Taxes Ruled Out

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

A plan for couples to pay less income tax—by husbands selling stock at a loss and wives buying it back—was ruled out by the Supreme Court yesterday.

The decision was one of nine handed down as the court neared the end of the year's work. With 22 cases that were argued during the year still before them, the justices hope to clean up their docket and adjourn for the summer next Monday.

John P. McWilliams of Cleveland, president of the Youngstown Steel Door Co., took the tax plan to the court. He told his broker to sell stock, for tax losses. Then he had it bought back, for his wife's account, at about the same price.

Sometimes McWilliams had his wife, or his mother, sell the stock, and he bought it back. In this way the McWilliams family kept its stock, but showed losses that would cut down their income taxes more than the broker's commissions for handling the sales and purchases.

The family claimed losses of $42,571.76 in 1940 and 1941. Internal Revenue officials disallowed the losses and ordered the family to pay $13,436.67 in taxes for the two years. The Tax Court set this order aside, but the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals put it back in force.

Chief Justice Vinson said for the Supreme Court yesterday that Congress did not mean to leave a loophole in tax laws that was almost as big as those the laws were passed to close.

Mr. Vinson said that even though McWilliams and his family never got back the actual stock that they sold, they got back the same thing, so that their plan came under the rule against family deals to cut taxes.

Justice Burton, who once was Mayor of Cleveland, did not take part in the case.

The court, in other orders yesterday, ruled that:

The Federal Power Commission had power to order a $596,320 rate cut by the Interstate Natural Gas Co. of Louisiana.

The Federal Court in New York may try a 39-million-dollar damage suit against former officers of Central States Electric Corp. Justice Frankfurter thought the case ought to be tried in the State courts.

Two sets of claims for back pay under the wage-hour overtime laws be settled according to the recent Portal Portal Act. The clause in question relieves the employer of liability if he acted in good faith, under a wage agreement.

Filipino Veterans

Few people in this country are aware, we suspect, of the shabby treatment meted out to the 400,000 Filipino veterans who were in the American Army during the war. Some months before Pearl Harbor, while the Philippine Islands were still under United States sovereignty, the President issued an order making the Filipino army a part of the American Army. Of course, this made the Filipino soldiers who constituted that army a part of our fighting forces as much as were soldiers drafted from the States, and they remained in this status until the eve of the Philippines' independence. Last year, however, Congress passed the First Rescission Act denying to Filipino veterans most of the benefits that go automatically to other veterans who were exposed to similar risks and hardships.

We can readily understand the reasoning of Congress in denying to Filipino veterans the full benefits of the so-called GI Bill of Rights. Since the Philippines have become a separate nation, they may be reasonably expected to assume the continuing burden of caring for injured veterans among their own people. After all, the Filipino soldiers fought for their homeland as well as for the United States. It seems to us unwarranted discrimination, however, to cut Filipino veterans off from mustering-out pay, from the benefits of the Terminal Leave Act and from back pay under the Missing Persons Act. The War Department has specifically recommended that Filipino veterans' rights under the Missing Persons Act be restored. It is one thing to leave the long-range problem of caring for disabled veterans to the new government at Manila, and quite another thing to deny to Filipinos the current benefits which they had earned as members of the American fighting forces. We cannot help thinking that if Congress reviews the situation, with full realization that these men were members of our own Army and subject to its orders, it will see that a grave injustice has been done.

Break In The Dike

Some persons will see in the congressional enactment of the new wool bill a return to economic isolationism. Such an assessment misses the mark. The super-protection provided for American wool stems, in our opinion, from a combination of purely domestic circumstances. It has been fostered by representatives of the Western wool-producing States in part as retaliation against Republican cuts in reclamation projects. Their colleagues then passed the buck to the President as a way out of a predicament which is always felt on the favor-bartering Hill. The trouble is that this action is buck-passing with economic peace and treaty observance.

The dilemma in the wool industry could have been resolved for at least the present by acceptance of the Senate bill providing for domestic subsidies. Instead, the conferees left the President with the ugly alternatives of raising the import fees or lowering the import quotas to support the price of domestic wool. It is bad enough that such ill-conceived action makes a mockery of all our high-sounding talk on new trade agreements at Geneva. What is worse is that the amended program, if upheld, will provide a flagrant violation of reciprocal trade agreements we have already signed with the wool-exporting nations.

As Mr. Stimson phrased it, it will "amount to a repudiation of the whole structure of American economic policy developed . . . during the 15 years since Cordell Hull began his great work for trade agreements" and would be "a shocking indication that the policy of the United States can at any time be shackled by the sort of economic short-sightedness for which all the world has paid so dearly in recent years." If this blow is sustained in contravention of our pledged word, what nation can then afford to trust us? An emphatic veto should be forthcoming.

Veterans' Preference

As thousands of competent war service appointees find their jobs evaporating, veterans taking Civil Service tests are still able to qualify for Government employment even though they do not make passing grades. This is possible through the Veterans' Preference Act of 1944, which automatically adds 5 to 10 points to the score of veterans on examinations, whatever the original grade. The point premium helps in a small way to atone for the disadvantage suffered by veterans while they were in service. But to favor veterans who have not attained passing grades in the first place actually discriminates against civilians and tends to lower the caliber of personnel available for Federal jobs.

The Senate Civil Service Committee now has reported out a bill which would correct this discrepancy without injuring the concept of veterans' preference. The Cain bill would require that in order to benefit from the extra points, a veteran must attain a passing grade of 70 on his Civil Service examination before the premium is added. Furthermore, only veterans with 10 per cent or more disability would be eligible for the full 10-point preference, and 30 per cent disability would be required before veterans would be placed at the top of the eligible list. These seem to us common-sense amendments on which we hope both houses of Congress will act. The changes will do nothing to deprive any veteran who is actually qualified of his guaranteed rights, but they will serve to increase the efficiency of Federal employment, which is a fundamental aim of the Civil Service system.

Bevin In Paris

The proof of the welcome given in Europe to Secretary Marshall's speech of June 5 is the meeting today in Paris between Mr. Bevin and Mr. Bidault. These foreign ministers will set the machinery in motion for producing some kind of a general recovery plan for submission to Washington. So much time has been wasted that the temptation will be to expect quick results. But the job to which the two statesmen have set their hands cannot be done speedily. It requires expert handling on the political as well as on the economic level.

In France the Communists will look askance at a tie-up in western Europe without Russian participation. To be sure, they are recovery-minded (for they supported the Monnet Plan), but they may oppose any scheme of division of labor with their western neighbors. In Britain the nationalizers are in the saddle. Some of them want reform even at the expense of recovery, seeing the present as a golden opportunity for extending the area of socialism. Then there are intricate tasks ahead for engineers, industrialists and economists to frame fresh blueprints. All this labor will take time. But the fact of today's meeting is proof that the will has been mobilized by the two governments to give an answer to the Marshall challenge—and that in itself is ground for the hope that a continental plan will soon be in the making.

The need, as we see it, is the outline of a specific project of supra-national scope, coupled with a skeleton agreement to work out other plans on the basis of commonly accepted principles. Coal is king of recovery. And the Ruhr is the heart of the coal problem. If a plan could be suggested for putting the Ruhr on its economic feet again, the first step on the way to real recovery in Europe would have been taken. All the western countries now have to draw on American coal, and this dependence entails one of the greatest drains on their supply of dollars, for American coal laid down in European ports costs over $20 a ton. German miners will not work harder unless they get carrot-and-stick treatment. The carrot should take the form of more food for miners' families and more consumer goods and amenities; the stick must be such an apportionment of the product as will put the coal where it can be most profitably used in terms of European recovery. It is simply uneconomic in these days to let the coal be used by industries that can only thrive behind tariff barriers. A plan to be put into effect by a sort of coal dictator armed with ample powers is necessary.

Such a plan should go hand in hand with an agreement on the principles of economic integration in Europe. This is what we mean when we say that Ruhr coal should go where it can be used most profitably in the interests of all. Let us take, as example, the steel industry. Before 1932, when Britain turned from a free trade to a tariff system, the industry in western Europe was highly integrated. That is to say, it was a single complex. Britain imported scrap, pig iron and semimanufactured steel products, and turned out fabricated articles. Now, behind the tariff wall, the industry is more self-contained. What is needed is a return to division of labor in the steel industry with continental countries. This is one illustration of what is required of an over-all plan. The automotive trade could be similarly made into a single complex, and in this way the specialties left to one country could be assured of such a big market that prices would be cut to all consumers. Division of labor in western Europe would be a mighty reform. It would be the greatest engine of production we can think of. And in turn the dependence on America would get less and less as the scheme unfolded in practice.

For such a scheme there should be understanding help in America. Mr. Hoover warns us of the waste in our substance involved in our present heavy exports to Europe. In some quarters his argument will spell the need for curtailment. We would use it as an argument for a substantial aid program; that is to say, of more exports carefully directed so that they will speed reconstruction. Of course, we do not blink the fact that help in reconstruction will be a drain, and that it will have a tendency to keep our American prices high. But the nature of the program would put a term to what might be called unnatural exports, e.g., coal. And in the long run the drain would be repaired by an inward flow of those resources of which we are short from the countries we help. Mr. Stassen brought this out in his pro-aid speech. Why not stockpile, he asked, out of the proceeds of the reconstruction that we can initiate out of our thriving capital goods industries?

The alternative to an aid program is an impoverished Europe, a prey to political extremism, a mendicant on our doorsteps, and a perpetual trouble spot of the world's peace. There is no choice in this matter. This is evidently Senator Vandenberg's opinion, and his suggestion of a bipartisan committee at the American end is eminently sound. Such a committee should include men of both parties who not only have knowledge but also have that wisdom which comes of possession of a wide survey and a forward view.

Tax Bill Veto

In our opinion the President's veto of the tax bill would have been a stronger document if less space had been devoted to refuting specious arguments that tax reduction is needed now to avert an imminent recession and more attention had been paid to the budgetary problems resulting from our "great responsibilities for international relief and rehabilitation." The President dismisses the latter extremely important argument in favor of deferring tax reduction in a single sentence placed inconspicuously in the middle of a paragraph discussing the necessity of the utmost economy in government and conservative management of fiscal affairs in this transition period. Yet the foreign aid program which the Administration is now sponsoring will entail outlays of many billions that any forthright appraisal of the financial outlook must take into account. By forfeiting the opportunity afforded him to make that fact plain the President doubtless was governed by considerations of political expediency. This lack of candor is, we believe, poor policy, because public support for foreign aid will not be won by minimizing the fact that it will entail financial sacrifices on the part of the American people.

The message states that maintenance of the integrity of the public debt requires its immediate reduction by substantial amounts. We have consistently maintained that budgetary surpluses should be currently applied to tax reduction in times like these when business is booming and tax reduction is not essential to stimulate a lagging economy. But we greatly doubt whether any substantial debt reduction will be possible in the immediate future in view of the outlays we shall be called upon to make to help other nations restore their shattered economies. Nor do we think that the credit of the United States would be jeopardized if we should be compelled to forgo substantial debt reductions by diverting anticipated budgetary surpluses to foreign relief. The President is likely to be embarrassed by his overemphatic claim that immediate substantial debt reduction is imperative.

Apart from questions of timing, objections to the specific provisions of the tax bill are twofold: (1) it gives proportionately too little relief to those in the low income tax brackets; and (2) it is limited to individual income taxes. The first objection is warranted to some extent, though it fails to take cognizance of the fact that it is in the highest brackets that tax rates reach confiscatory levels that discourage investment enterprise. The second objection is extremely cogent. For the passage of a limited tax reduction program at this time would unquestionably interfere with a later comprehensive tax revision program such as the country needs.

Balky House

There is good reason for the rising public concern over the failure of Congress to do anything about housing. Millions of Americans are still struggling for a decent place in which to live. The shortage of housing is probably the most acute domestic problem that the war has left with us. It calls for a great national effort to plan and build the type of dwellings that the people want and need. But in place of such a national effort we are getting feverish activity on the part of a limited number of builders to reap a fortune out of over-priced houses that the people most in need of shelter cannot afford to buy. The result is certainly not a happy commentary on our democratic machinery for serving the national welfare.

Representative Javits seems to have concluded that the only hope of substituting an orderly and constructive program for the present floundering and confusion is to conduct a searching investigation into the problem in the next six months. Introducing a resolution to create a special House committee for that purpose, he expressed a belief that "the vast majority of the American people are tired of labor, industry and Government bickering about who is guilty in the 'case of the missing home.'" Perhaps this is the only means by which the House can be made to see its own responsibility in the matter.

Whatever may be said of the short-sighted policies of builders and organized building labor, the overshadowing fact is that Congress has not yet given us a national housing policy. It has not yet recognized good housing as one of the first essentials of our national health and welfare. Instead, Congress seems to be moving in the opposite direction. The rent control bill now taking final shape will take away restraints on commercial building and thus further diminish the volume of critical materials available for residential construction. At the same time the House Appropriations Committee has cut so deeply into the Federal housing subsidy fund as to disrupt even the existing arrangements which make the operation of low-rental public housing possible.

This attitude seems the more inexcusable because a well balanced and forward-looking national housing policy is readily at hand in the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill, which is also sponsored in the House by Representative Javits. It is said that Senator Taft has promised to press the measure before the Senate and favorable action is anticipated. It is the House that is balking. Taking note of this situation, more than 30 organizations are sponsoring a "Fight for Housing" day on June 25 to acquaint our legislators with the public demand. We wish them success, for we are convinced that no issue is of greater social and economic importance to the country than the proper use of our resources to provide decent homes for the people.

"Don't You Know There's A Housing Shortage Here?"

Air Crashes

It would seem as though the CAB or the ICC should insist on grounding these big commercial planes until they can establish the cause of the mishaps which seem to be increasing with alarming rapidity.

As a scientist—and amateur pilot—I believe both the immediate cause and an effective preventive to be rather clear. These big plans carry too much weight for the amount of "lift" they produce at normal flying speeds in "thin" or low-pressure areas. As a consequence, they are unable to get off the ground (as in the La Guardia crash), or they settle to that level where the density of the air is sufficient to maintain flight at their normal speed—either to dangerous levels as in the Maryland crash or to levels below those of surrounding obstructions as in the Leesburg crash.

In all of these crashes the planes were in the hands of competent pilots—which makes it more apparent that the failure of the plane to respond to proper controls was directly responsible. And since all these crashes occurred in low pressure areas, it would seem clear that insufficient air densities failed to maintain the "lift" needed for such heavy carriers.

Two remedies are also indicated: (1) insistence on a higher ratio of "lifting" surface to gross weight for these heavier planes, and (2) the establishment of minimum barometric pressures before such planes will be cleared for take-off. Perhaps a third condition could also be properly included—to stop this pussyfooting around with explanations following a crash and come out with the facts.

"Crucial Test"

Your editorial of June 14, "President and Congress: Crucial Test," contained some strange views on the relationship between the President and Congress. The basis for your argument that the President should not veto the labor bill rests on two points: (1) "The veto power is only designed as a safeguard against legislation which . . . would not be approved by the Congress after being advised of its errors"; and (2) the President must accept this bill if he expects future cooperation from Congress in foreign affairs.

On your first point the Constitution says if the President "approve (a bill) he shall sign it, but if not he shall return it with his objections . . . ." This seems to be as simple and clear as possible. Certainly it says nothing about limiting the veto to "legislation, which because of mistake or haste or the overlooking of important considerations, would not be approved by the Congress after being advised of its errors."

I should be very interested in knowing where in the Constitution, Farrand, The Records of the Federal Convention, The Federalist, or Eliot's Debates you have found evidence that the veto power was "designed" for such limited use. It is true that up until the time of Jackson, the Presidents vetoed laws only when they alleged the measures were unconstitutional or unworkable, but for the past 120 years this has not been the case.

Your second point is best answered by your statement in the same editorial that the tax reduction bill deserves to be vetoed. Why should Congress resent one veto more than another? I think it is a fair inference that you think the President should cooperate with Congress on legislation you approve and veto legislation you disapprove.

You comment that "The world will wonder who pulls the strings of our Government" if this bill is vetoed. I should think that the passage of this bill—added to the removal of excise profits taxes, removal of price controls, the butchery of the housing program, injunctions against labor unions, the present tax bill, and the present move to wreck rent and housing controls—would leave the world in little doubt about who pulls the strings. It couldn't be the NAM, could it? Please note that in general the "all-powerful" labor unions opposed every one of those measures. Certainly are strong, aren't they? Run the country, don't they?

"One World" for a Day

I have just finished reading Malvina Lindsey's fine column of June 12, "'One World' for a Day" and I was greatly impressed by it. As I understand U. N. Delegate Ording's plan, it sounds like something really fine that should not be allowed to die in the discussion stage.

I hope your paper will play it up a great deal and show us what we as individuals can do.

Un-American Activities

From the time of its formation and including your editorial of June 14, "Ballyhoo," you have been taking editorial pot shots at the House Committee on Un-American Activities as such, and not because of any one thing the committee does. It appears that your policy is opposed to any investigation of communism, fascism, or other threat to our form of Government.

As a well known and read Washington paper it is time you began to realize that people are getting a little fed up on your Communist-inspired editorials (there is no basic difference between communism and fascism) attacking this committee which is trying to preserve the Americanism which you seem willing to lose by supporting redicals in their efforts to make a laughing stock of the committee.

Why don't you clean house upstairs? ROBERT C. SNOW.

Several times within the past two years I have criticized the form and the substance of the editorial page of The Post. Now, to keep the record straight, I'd like to express approval of the content, the composition, and the general tone of such editorials as "Fascism in Action" which appeared in the June 10 issue. To my mind such editorializing is sound, substantial and deserving of credit.

Hoover's Plan for Germany

After reading Mr. Herbert Hoover's letter to Chairman Taber of the House Appropriations Committee, published May 27, regarding the treatment of Germany, I am convinced that if Mr. Hoover's recommendations were carried out, the structure of peace would be built upon quicksand.

The sum and substance of Mr. Hoover's latest proposals is that the Allies must ignore the lessons learned from our failure to protect the peace after World War I and to discard the economic controls agreed upon at the meetings of the Big Three. The Allies will be repeating the mistakes made in 1919, if Mr. Hoover's views are made official policy.

The Allies paid bitterly during World War II for not having learned the nature of such economic controls and for not having imposed them upon Germany. It is apparent that Mr. Hoover would repeat the very same blunders again when he states "It is urgent that we at once revise the reparations and industrial demilitarization policies imposed . . . by various Allied agreements."

Mr. Hoover conveniently forgets the fact that the whole aggregate of economic anad industrial power, left intact after World War I, enabled the Germans to experiment and plan for the future production of weapons of war. When Mr. Hoover now calls for the elimination of the disarmament program, he not only approves the present failure of military disarmament (in the British zone, for instance, only 7 per cent of the tank, gun and other military factors have been eliminated thus far) but in fact, is in favor of a policy to leave the tremendous German war potential intact.

Significantly, Mr. Hoover also ignores the entire problem of atomic research which would imply that Germany should be permitted to engage in such work.

The implementation of Mr. Hoover's recommendations would make Germany the greatest industrial power in Europe. When Mr. Hoover advocates the scrapping of the reparations program to which our country is committed, he is striking an irreparable blow at the economic rehabilitation of Germany's victims. Thus, Mr. Hoover completely ignores the plight of the occupied countries which were deliberately bled white, in order to perpetuate Germany's economic domination of Europe.

Mr. Hoover, in discussing reparations, omits pertinent facts which the American people should know. He failed to tell Representative Taber and the public that, out of 1557 plants which have been earmarked for reparations, only six have been actually delivered to the victims of German aggression. Nor does he reveal the sabotage of reparations deliveries by the Germans and the failure of the Allies to prevent it. Although Mr. Hoover knows the serious conditions of French industry, due to war devastation and the shortage of coal, he complains that "we are supplying France with Ruhr coal which could be used in the manufacture of exports from Germany with which to pay for food."

The American people should know the real facts which Mr. Hoover has chosen to bypass:

1. Besides the fact that France is not getting reparations from the Ruhr, she must pay in dollars or in gold for the small quantity of coal she gets from Germany. These dollars are being used by the AMG to pay for food imported to Germany—contrary to Mr. Hoover's implications.

2. France has received only 160 thousand tons of coal per month from Germany for the first quarter of 1947, although she must import 10 times as much to balance her economy.

3. At present, Germany retains 79 per cent of the coal produced in the Ruhr and only 21 per cent is sold to all her neighbors, against dollar payment.

4. The present German consumption of coal per capita, per year, is greater than in France.

5. German coal which is a major factor in European industry is being deliberately withheld in order to use it as a political and economic weapon against Germany's neighbors.

Though Mr. Hoover was supposed to survey the German situation from the point of view of our security requirements, he has presented a distorted picture. Because we listened to Herbert Hoover after World War I, we paid in blood, sweat and tears. Must we pay that price again?

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Core Of Isolation

BEHIND THE furious huffing and puffing in the House over the Voice of America broadcasts was something very like a concerted plot. Among the never-say-die isolationists, word had passed around that this was the moment for all-out resistance.

That is the theory, at any rate, of those who led the fight for the Mundt bill. You could almost believe that someone skilled in behind-scenes strategy had said:

"All right, boys, now is the time to start going back in the other direction. This international stuff has gone far enough. Let's stop it right here."

The drive on this modest goal—to authorize by law a foreign broadcasting program — exceeded anything heard in recent months. By comparison, the opposition to the Greek-Turkish aid bill was a mere whisper.

Every stop on the isolationist organ was pulled out. There were the perfectionists who said we shouldn't do anything for those foreigners until we had made everybody happy here at home. Trembling doubters said that if we let foreign professors and foreign students into this country under the cultural exchange program, our own American students would be corrupted by sinister isms. Those who took this crystalline-pure isolationist line didn't seem to realize that it was an insult to the integrity of American youth to say their convictions would yield before the slightest contact with a foreign viewpoint.

REPRESENTATIVE Karl Mundt of South Dakota led the fight for the measure he introduced. Other Republicans on the House Foreign Affairs Committee served as blocking tackles to beat down the obstructionist tactics of the isolationists.

Likewise, most of the opposition came from Republicans. In the opening debate, the only Democrat to speak against the bill was Mississippi's Representative John E. Rankin.

Significantly, in view of the contest just a year away, this had the look of an intra-party fight. It suggests that the Republicans are split in much the same way that the party of President Truman and Henry Wallace is split.

Responsible Republican leaders who reject isolationism are doing some serious thinking about next year in terms of this intra-party division. They are aware of the power of Col. Robert R. McCormick and his Chicago Tribune, which just celebrated its centennial with a great fanfare of self-acclaim.

They are aware, too, that one of the Tribune's pets, Senator C. Wayland Brooks of Illinois, will be running for reelection in 1948. How Brooks can run on a platform that would be acceptable to Harold Stassen, Senator Vandenberg or Governor Dewey and his adviser on foreign affairs, John Foster Dulles, is one of those political problems that are usually met by trying to pretend that the right hand knows nothing of what the left hand is up to.

Of the 20 House members who spoke against the Mundt bill in the opening debate on Friday, 13 could be broadly classified as from the Middle West. Three were from Illinois, two from Michigan and two from Nebraska. This is the geography of the hard core of isolationism.

On the other hand, of course, Mundt is from South Dakota. And two who were for the bill, Representatives Dirksen and Busbey, are from Illinois. In general, however, support has come from the South and the East.

Evidence piles up of the good effects of the State Department's modest information program. A recent visitor to India writes of the crowds of Indians of every walk of life who throng to the American libraries maintained in the principal cities. Often throughout the day lines of people were waiting for a place at a reading table as they would wait in America outside a movie theater.

The Senate is likely to accept the Mundt bill with far less fuss. The grim facts of the present-day world have worked on the hard core of isolationism in the upper chamber to reduce it to a small faction.

One thing the isolationists in the House have done. They have supplied some useful ammunition for the voice of Moscow, which wants to convince the world that we are about to retire behind our own iron curtain.

Korean Independence

Whatever plans the United States and Russia may have to discuss and decide during the present session of Russo-American joint conference, now in progress in Seoul, thinking Koreans believe that the only safe way to preserve the peace and security not only of Korea but also of the United States, Russia and of other nations, lies in the immediate elevation of Korea on the status of a neutral and sovereign state as a Switzerland of Asia.

Such achievement would constitute a precedent for solving of all problems between the United States and Russia on the basis of mutual trust.

When Korea is so elevated and her sovereignty and neutrality is so guaranteed by the United States and Russia with the concurrence of Great Britain and China, Korea may become, then, a member of the United Nations and serve as the symbol of international justice and fair play and as a medium of world peace instead of a bone of contention.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Generalities Won't Help

BOTH SENATOR Vandenberg and Mr. Hoover have asked the same question: what can the United States afford to export in order to assure the rehabilitation of the European and the world economy? This crucial question can be stated in general terms but it cannot be answered in general terms. It will have to be answered by making an estimate of the actual commodities which the outer world must obtain on a time schedule in the American market, and then of matching this estimate against what we can supply out of surplus, plus what we could supply by increasing the production of certain goods and by reducing our own consumption of certain goods.

Lippmann

THE GREAT virtue of Secretary Marshall's approach to the problem is precisely that it will bring about a budgeting of the world's needs and our own actual and potential supplies. Thus the question will be answerable when the leading foreign countries have produced a consolidated estimate and time schedule of their needs, and when each important item in the estimate has been compared with our actual and our potential production and consumption.

TO ATTEMPT to answer the question in advance, in the abstract, and theoretically, is impossible. For neither the needs of the outer world nor our own capacity to supply them are, as engineers would say, constants. They are variables, which allow wide margins for adjustments, ingenuity, extra effort, and sacrifice.

For example. The inquiry might show that an increase of European coal production in the next three years would greatly decrease European needs for American exports. It might show that to increase coal production, there is needed machinery from the United States, extra rations for miners, and additional consumer goods. It would be worth a very special effort by the United States to manufacture that machinery, to allocate the extra food and the extra goods. This would be a strategic, as distinguished from an aimless, contribution to the rehabilitation of Europe which would more than pay for itself because the effect would be to make Europe less dependent on America. It would tend to cure the very thing which Mr. Hoover, for example, fears—that we shall deplete our own resources by over-exporting.

IF, ON THE other hand, we debate the problem in generalities, we shall arrive at a series of hopeless contradictions. We shall argue in one breath that we cannot afford to assist in effective rehabilitation. In the next breath we shall denounce the spread of communism, proclaim our determination to halt the expansion of Russia,—all of which if it means anything at all, means that in the last analysis we would fight rather than surrender Europe and Asia to Soviet domination.

But if we cannot afford to rehabilitate Europe, which might cost us six or seven billions a year, how on earth can we talk as if we might resist Russia by war, when that might well cost us perhaps six billions a month? If we cannot afford to provide the working capital for the rehabilitation of our allies, what sense does it make to talk as if we could afford to go to war to defend them and ourselves?

WE SHOULD NOT debate this great, urgent, and extremely practical problem in generalities. The vice of generalities, including some of Mr. Hoover's theorizing and his obiter dicta, is that they produce heat rather than light, prejudice rather than judgment, and obscure the formulation of definite policies and a concrete program.

Russia And The Atom

By Ernest Lindley

Why Do They Oppose Control?

WHY THE RUSSIANS remain opposed to effective international control of atomic energy is conjecture.

Lindley

They might be able to produce atomic weapons of their own within another year or two. However, some persons familiar with the processes by which fissionable material can be concentrated think that it would take the Russians a good many years to produce atomic energy in significant amounts. Russian technology generally, is backward. The jump from the scientific knowledge to the facilities for accumulating fissionable materials on a large scale is a long one.

The Politburo may fear that effective international control would be a threat to the Communist dictatorship. Certainly an International Atomic Development Authority, with its personnel drawn from all countries and its broad powers of operation and inspection would cause a wide breach in the iron curtain. The Russians have agreed in principle to international inspection. But the inspection vaguely outlined by Mr. Gromyko in his speech last week could be so circumscribed as to be meaningless.

What is not open to conjecture is the fact that there is still an immense gap between the Russian atomic proposals and the essentials of effective international control—control which will provide reasonable assurance against the launching of surprise assaults with atomic weapons.

THE ESSENTIALS were set forth in the Baruch plan of a year ago. After extended study, they were indorsed by all the nations represented on the original U. N. Atomic Energy Commission excepting the Soviet Union and Poland, which refrained from voting.

For nearly a year the Russians have maneuvered, at times appearing to be very stubborn, at times appearing to yield a little ground. When examined closely, however their "concessions" have not been significant. Mr. Gromyko's latest speech can be interpreted to mean either nothing or a rather substantial concession. But even if it is substantial, it falls short of meeting the minimum requirements for effective international control.

Most of the minimum requirements are not a matter of political opinion or ideology. They arise inexorably from the nature of atomic energy. A year ago, the Soviet position might have been attributed to ignorance. But with the time to study the problem which they now have had, the Russians must be aware that with the exception of the veto question, which is primarily legal or political, the U. N. plan was based on technical studies. It was intensive study of the technical factors involved which impelled the Lilienthal-Acheson group to the verdict that inspection alone would not provide security against clandestine arming with atomic weapons—that the principal atomic productive facilities themselves, from mines to finished products, must be operated or closely supervised at all times by an international agency.

FURTHER ARGUMENT over the broad structure of international control would appear to be useless at this time. The only practicable course is to proceed with the drafting of a detailed international atomic agreement based on the general plan already approved by the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission, Russia and Poland excepted. It is conceivable that by the time such an agreement has been worked out the Russians will change their minds. If the Russians do not change their minds, then it will be necessary for the non-Soviet nations to decide what further steps should be taken to secure themselves against the perils of atomic aggression begun without warning. It may be necessary to treat a nation which refuses to accept such control in the same way as if it agreed to such control and then violated the agreement—that is, as an aggressor.

We do not know exactly when the deadline for effective international control of atomic energy will arrive. But we know that it is not a deadline which the United States or most of the rest of the world can let pass nonchalantly.

The Marshall Plan

By Barnet Nover

The Stakes And The Costs

JUST SUPPOSE the war had not ended in 1945 but had dragged on into 1946. Even as late at the German surrender, it will be recalled, some of our top-flight military leaders were convinced that another year of fighting was still ahead of us.

NOVER

Had their gloomy calculations proved to be correct, would the American people have cavilled at the vast additional expenditures that would have been necessary to achieve victory?

Of course not. To win the war, no sacrifices were too great.

We won the war. We won it decisively. But we do not yet have peace.

HOW MUCH is peace worth to us, in dollars and cents?

Is it worth, say, the cost of a year of fighting?

The question should answer itself. If we do not in the time that is available make peace secure—many feel that the sands are already beginning to run out—all the brave young lives that were sacrificed, all the money that was spent, all the tremendous efforts that were made in World War II, will have been in vain.

How can we make peace secure? It cannot be done merely by idly wishing for it. It cannot be done, as the overwhelming majority now grimly realize, by a policy of isolation. Nor can it be done merely by plugging up big and little holes in the dike as the tide of Communist Russian expansion threatens to inundate now this country, now that.

Such emergency action may, from time to time, prove unavoidable. That was the situation when President Truman asked Congress to appropriate the sum of 400 million dollars to help Greece and Turkey.

It may be necessary to take emergency action of that kind with respect to certain other countries—Italy, for example—where the process of economic and financial deterioration has been such that it cannot be halted by even the best long-range rehabilitation programs.

IN GENERAL, however, the only real hope of peace lies in what Secretary Marshall has described as "the revival of a working economy in the world so as to permit the emergence of political and social conditions in which free institutions can exist."

The program of action which General Marshall envisages is bold, comprehensive, far-ranging. It views the problem of world rehabilitation, beginning with the rehabilitation of Europe, as one to be dealt with not piecemeal but on a continent-wide basis, with the European nations themselves taking the lead.

IN GREAT BRITAIN, the Marshall plan has been greeted with tremendous enthusiasm. That has not been the case in France.

France is torn between an earnest desire to cooperate in bringing the Marshall plan to fruition and fear of what Russia's reaction will be if she does.

Though outside the government, the Communists remain a powerful force in the Fourth Republic. Their attitude toward the Marshall plan has, up to now, been one of undiluted suspicion. They regard it as a manifestation of "American imperialism;" also as a device to create an anti-Soviet western bloc.

This attitude may be modified or abandoned if the Russians accept Foreign Minister Bidault's invitation to join in the current Anglo-French discussions of the Marshall plan.

FROM AN ECONOMIC point of view Russia would stand to gain much by European rehabilitation. From a political point of view, the men in the Kremlin may decide that Russia has more to gain if Europe sinks deeper and deeper into chaos.

In any case, Russia's attitude must not be allowed to determine the future of the Marshall plan. If she cooperates, well and good. If she refuses to cooperate or if she joins in the discussions only to sabotage them, Europe, or as much of it as feasible, must be organized without her. Given the present extremely critical plight of so many European nations, time is of the very essence.

Any program of European rehabilitation, whether all of the nations of that continent join in it or only the nations of the west, will have to depend in large measure on the support we give it.

This brings us back to the question asked earlier: What is peace worth to us?

For the fiscal year 1944-45, the climactic year of the war, the United States spent for military purposes the sum of $83,611,000,000.

Nobody, not General Marshall or Dean Acheson or Benjamin Cohen or former Gov. Harold Stassen or even Henry Wallace has suggested we spend that much for world rehabilitation. Indeed, for a portion of that sum we can help put Europe back on its feet.

If we do, the benefits to us will be worth many times the cost. If we fail, the ultimate price of failure will, in the opinion of those who have their finger on the racing pulse of the very sick world, be staggering. We cannot afford to fail.

Pendergast Tax Overpaid

Church-State Break Threat Faces Britain

London, June 16 (U.P.).—The Most Rev. and Right Hon. Cyril Forster Garbett, Archbishop of York, charged today a spreading "tendency toward totalitarianism" threatened the independence of the church.

He threatened the possibility of a complete break between the state and official church—which corresponds to the Episcopal Church in the United States—unless a four-point "freedom" program was accepted by Parliament.

The Archbishop of Canterbury said he was in wholehearted agreement with Garbett, who demanded:

1. Changes in form of worship recommended to be approved by the King, as "Defender of the Faith," without reference to Parliament.

2. Establishment of ecclesiastical courts from whose decisions there would be no right of appeal to civil courts except on points of procedure.

3. The church to be consulted in appointment of its chief officers, now a matter for the Prime Minister.

4. Convocations of the church to have the power to frame and enact its own religious laws.

If Parliament does not accept the "freedom" program, the archbishop said, "disestablishment and disendowment will be unavoidable."

"The state increasingly exercises control over every department of the life of the community," he wrote.

"A church so controlled would be unable to develop freely its spiritual life, to organize its worship, express its fate and to bear witness against political injustice and social wrong."

Swedish King Marks His 89th Birthday

Stockholm, June 16 (AP).—King Gustaf V received a mountainous, crown-topped cake today as he quietly observed his eighty-ninth birthday.

He asked for no official celebration, but Tullgarn Palace overflowed with flowers and gifts. A battery opposite the palace fired a 21-gun salute and flags were flown throughout Sweden for the King who has ruled 39 years.

Truman Asks Conferees to Speed Bills

By The Associated Press

Congressional leaders conferred for 30 minutes yesterday with President Truman, but reported that he avoided any reference to the controversial tax reduction and labor union control bills.

Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), President Pro Tempore of the Senate, said Mr. Truman urged that action be expedited on 15 to 20 bills on which approval needed prior to June 30.

Virtually all of the measures have passed one house or the other and are "well on their way to passage," Vandenberg added.

Vandenberg is one of the so-called "Big Six" with whom the President has conferred from time to time. Only Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the Democrat minority leader, was absent from today's session.

Others attending were House Democratic Lealer Rayburn (Tex.), Republican Senate Leader White (Me.), House Speaker Martin (Mass.), and Republican House Leader Halleck (Ind.).

Vandenberg said Mr. Truman gave the group a list of the bills on which action is desired by June 30. They involve legislation about which the President talked to the same group recently and cover, Vandenberg said, about 12 general subjects, including war powers due to expire at the end of the month.

He also mentioned export controls, extension of the powers of the Maritime Commission, and extension of rent controls.

Vandenberg said that wool legislation also was discussed, but he did not elaborate on it.

Interstate Petroleum Pact Extension Voted

By The Associated Press

A resolution extending through September 1, 1951, an interstate petroleum agreement designed to conserve oil was passed yesterday by the Senate and sent to the House.

The pact, scheduled to expire September 1 unless renewed, has been in effect since 1935. President Truman recommended that it be extended.

Labor Agency Plan Doomed, Sen. Taft Says

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) yesterday said he believed that the Senate will defeat President Truman's Reorganization Plan No. 2 The proposed program would retain the United States Employment Service in the Labor Department, and give the Secretary of Labor authority over the Wage-Hour Administration.

Taft gave his prediction to reporters after Labor Secretary Schwellenbach told a Senate Labor subcommittee that Government activity in labor fields was "marked by lack of coordination, dispersion of authority and duplicating functions." The Reorganization Plan would help correct this situation, he declared.

Senator Donnell Opposed

Senator Donnell, another member of the subcommittee, said he opposed the plan because:

1. It does not consolidate the USES and the unemployment compensation functions of the Federal Security Agency.

2. It would place administration of the Fair Labor Standards Act in the hands of the Secretary of Labor who, by statute, is required to be a partisan of labor.

The House already has rejected the plan. It will nevertheless become law unless the Senate also votes its disapproval before the end of this month.

"Chaos of Establishments"

Schwellenbach referred to "the chaos of establishments" in the Federal Government. There are more than 100, he pointed out, and the number made it impossible for the President or Congress to exercise effective supervision. Nor, he said, "can overlapping, duplicating and contradictory policies be avoided."

There is no part of Government he added, where there is greater need for reorganization than in the field of labor. Every Federal office claims an interest in it, yet there does not appear to be "sufficient recognition that the complicated questions which arise out of the labor issue must be handled by experts."

McCarran's Effort To Repeal Travel Tax Is Defeated

By The Associated Press

Senator McCarran (D., Nev.) tried unsuccessfully yesterday to repeal the 15 per cent Federal tax on railroad, bus, and airline tickets.

He offered a repealer provision as an amendment to a highly technical bill which extends until July 1, 1948, the period for tax-free release of powers of appointment created before the 1942 revenue act went into effect.

Chairman Millikin (R., Colo.) of the finance committee objected and McCarran withdrew his amendment.

The bill relating to powers of appointment was then cleared to the White House.

Hollanders Emigration

Amsterdam, June 16 (U.P.).—Four hundred Dutch farmers and their families, totalling approximately 1000 persons, will sail tomorrow for Canada aboard the American ship Waterman in the first big-scale emigration from Holland since the war.

Senate Passes Interior Bill Cut by 27%

By The Associated Press

The Senate passed and sent back to the House yesterday a $215,530,000 Interior Department appropriations bill representing a 27 per cent cut under President Truman's estimates.

The revised measure carries $54,116,000 more new appropriations than voted by the House. But Senator Wherry (R., Nebr.) said 41 million dollars of this increase is required to cover operations that the House mistakenly had believed could be financed out of the department's carry-over from previous years appropriations.

Wherry said the Senate figure is $80,605,000 under the President's estimates of department needs and $43,021,000 under the amount given the department in the year ending June 30.

The Senate approved the bill without changing any of the individual items previously voted by its appropriations committee.

The chief fund increase in the measure went to the Reclamation Bureau, which received $36,837,000 more new money than voted by the House. This still was $41,221,000 under the estimates of President Truman, who protested in a Kansas City speech recently against reductions in reclamation and power funds.

The Senate Committee said in its report on the bill that, counting $85,826,000 in carry-over construction funds, the bureau will have a total of $160,947,000 available in the year beginning July 1. It said this compared with a total of $146,526,000 made available by the House.

Calling on Congress to establish a national public power policy, the committee increased funds for the Bonneville Power Administration by $9,314,000 over the amount voted by the House. However, it cut the appropriation for the Southwestern Power Administration $1,246,000 under the House total.

Red Prisons Outnumber Nazis', German Says

Berlin, June 16 (U.P.).—Franz Neumann, leader of the Social Democratic Party here, said today that there are more concentration camps in the Russian zone of Germany than there were at any time during the Nazi regime.

Addressing a party rally in the French sector, Neumann charged that politicians, opposed to the Communist - dominated Socialist Unity Party in the Russian zone were "persecuted so that today there are more concentration camps in the Eastern zone than during the period of 1933-45."

New York Cotton

New York, June 16 (AP).—Cotton futures turned firm today, following early easiness, as short covering and mill buying met limited offerings. Final prices were 20 cents to $1 a bale higher than the previous close.

Early selling was influenced by favorable cotton crop weather. There was further evening-up in nearby July futures, anticipating first notice day.

Foreign advices said that Japan will curtail textile output to conserve dwindling cotton supplies. Details on the resumption of cotton trading with Germany were agreed upon by officials in the British and American zones of that country, it was reported, brightening prospects for American shippers entering that field soon.

New Peak Set By Corporate Nets in 1946

Corporation profits after taxes hit a record high last year, jumping two billion dollars above the previous peak set in midwar 1943, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.

The department estimated after-tax profits at $12,500,000,000.

It said corporate profits before taxes totaled $21,100,000,000, a peacetime record higher by one billion than 1945 but about $3,500,000,000 below the all-time record established in 1943.

The reasons that after-tax profits gained more sharply than the before-tax figures were elimination of the excess-profits tax and reduction of the corporation income tax from 40 to 38 per cent at the end of 1945, the department said.

Reasons it gave for the rise in profits on both bases during 1946 as compared with 1945 included:

1. Rapid expansion in production of civilian goods following reductions of military orders that had pushed profits down throughout the second half of 1945.

2. The "substantial price rise" that occurred in 1946, which lifted the dollar volume of corporate sales one billion over the previous year.

Comparing the relationship of profits to corporate sales, the department said:

1. Before-tax profits were "appreciably lower than in most of the war years," but higher than in 1929.

2. After-tax profits, however, were higher in relation to sales than in "most of the war years," but below the 1929 relationship.

Chicago, June 16 (AP).—Feed grains dropped sharply on the Board of Trade today in response to clear weather and rising temperatures in the Midwest. Wheat continued its downward trend, although losses were not as large as in corn and oats.

Final prices were above the day's lows as a rally developed toward the session's finish. Wheat ended unchanged to 2 cents lower, July 2.09¾@2.10; corn was 3¼ to 4½ lower, July 1.85@1.85¼, and oats were 3¼ to 3¾ lower, July 89⅛@89¼.

Cash interests were on the selling side of corn and there was some selling by those who had purchased last week in response to rains and floods. There has been no reliable estimate of the amount of damage to corn, although it generally is believed the loss was large in Iowa.

Hedging pressure again was apparent in wheat and some selling developed on the possibility of a shipping tieup. It was feared this might curtail the export program. Export houses received reports that stevedores were continuing to load grain and flour at most major ports.

General Motors invites you to visit this blue and silver herald of future rail progress—on display at B & O Railroad Station, on Georgia Ave., Silver Spring, Md.—Just north of District Line—June 17th through June 21st from 3 P. M. to 9 P. M.

A WONDROUS new train is paying a visit to this city.

It is the Train of Tomorrow, a beautiful Diesel liner created by General Motors as a living symbol of great advances to come in railroading. In it are four carloads of the most progressive and stimulating ideas ever developed for the comfort, convenience and pleasure of rail travelers.

Come see the Astra Dome, a 32-foot glass-enclosed observation deck nestled in the roof of each car — giving passengers a glorious, panoramic view of the passing landscape.

See a chair car that provides out-of-this-world luxury at down-to-earth cost—

A sleeping car that's a dream of comfort and roominess, night and day—

A spacious, tastefully decorated diner topped off by a glamorous roof garden—

An observation lounge that rivals the most exclusive clubs in facilities for relaxation and enjoyment.

See a whole parade of new ideas which we hope will make future railroad travel safer, swifter and pleasanter than ever before for more and more passengers.

General Motors is not in the railroad car building business. But it is, and always has been, interested in furthering all forms of transportation.

It hopes that the ideas and innovations presented in this train will some day be normal travel experience.

So, welcome aboard the Train of Tomorrow. We want you to enjoy this newest example of General Motors' steadfast aim — to make "MORE AND BETTER THINGS FOR MORE PEOPLE."

Wreco Breakup Plan Approved By U. S. Court

By S. Oliver Goodman

Justice Matthew F. McGuire in District Court yesterday approved the plan for dissolution of Washington Railway & Electric Co. (Wreco) and two subholding companies.

The plan previously was signed by the Securities and Exchange Commission on May 15.

Court approval marks the end of a battle started five years ago when the SEC directed Wreco's parent, the North American Co., to divest itself of its interest in Wreco.

Wreco, under terms of the dissolution plan, will dispose of its 50 per cent interest in Capital Transit Co. and will use the proceeds to redeem bank loans of $2,800,000.

The subholding companies to be dissolved are Washington & Rockville Railway Co. and Great Falls Power Co., whose water rights will be acquired by Potomac Electric Power Co., a 100 per cent owned subsidiary of Wreco. Holders of Wreco's 5 per cent noncallable preferred will receive reclassified securities of Pepco consisting of one share of new $50 preferred of Pepco and 4¼ shares of new Pepco common.

Wreco common stockholders will receive 40 shares of reclassified Pepco common for each share held.

Under the plan, additional shares of new Pepco preferred will be sold publicly to retire the present outstanding senior stock.

Gichner Expands Plant

Installation of a woodworking shop as part of the motor truck body plant of the Fred S. Gichner Iron Works, Inc., 1214 24th st. nw., was announced yesterday by officials.

At the same time the company announced that it had received contracts to build an additional 25 all-metal truck bodies for the Coca-Cola Bottling Co. of Richmond, Va. This order is a supplement to one for 30 previously received.

Bank Dividend Voted

Directors of National Capital Bank of Washington have declared a dividend of 4 per cent, or 40 cents a share, on capital stock, payable June 30 to stock of record June 23. President George A. Didden, jr., pointed out that this is the 112th consecutive dividend paid by the bank since its organization in 1889.

Bankers Attend School

Twenty Washington bankers are among nearly 1000 attending the thirteenth session of the Graduate School of Banking at Rutgers University in New Brunswick, N. J. The school was founded in 1935 to offer bank officers studies in banking, economics, law, government and philosophy. It is sponsored by the American Bankers Association.

Car Rate Boost Attacked

The Association of American Railroads and the American Short Line Railroad Association attacked in separate briefs yesterday an Interstate Commerce Commission proposal to increase the per diem charge for freight cars.

The ICC proposed an increase from $1.25 to at least $3.50 as a means of speedier handling of equipment.

The AAR said the plan, which has the support of the Office of Defense Transportation, "is without merit in fact or warrant in law."

The Short Line group said the ICC has no authority to order a penalty charge for freight car use and that even if it had such power there had been no showing to justify such a step.

The proceeding was instituted as a means of relieving the shortage of railroad freight cars. The ODT, in its brief, takes a position that if the charge was increased sufficiently to make it uneconomic to have an idle car on loan from another railroad, such equipment would be dispatched to its owners more quickly.

Hancock Heads AMA Board

The election of John M. Hancock, Lehman Bros., partner and member of the United States delegation to the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission, as board chairman of the American Management Association was announced today.

Alvin E. Dodd was reelected to a twelfth term as president. Harold Y. Coes of Ford, Bacon & Davis, Inc., succeeded Keith S. McHugh, American Telephone & Telegraph vice president, as chairman of the executive committee. McHugh was elected a director.

Equipment Issue Filed

The Pennsylvania Railroad Co. asked the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday for authority to issue $11,025,000 of equipment trust certificates series S, as part of its program to acquire 38 Diesel-electric passenger and freight locomotives, 116 passenger cars and 1000 freight cars with an over-all cost of at least $41,137,500.

Will Show New Products

New products of Frigidaire Division of General Motors Corp. will be introduced to dealers from Washington, Maryland, Virginia and Delaware at a three-day meeting in the Statler Hotel starting tomorrow.

J. A. Mitzelfelt, branch manager, said a new automatic clothes washer and electric dryer and ironer will be demonstrated. Speakers will include W. V. Heath, C. C. Billett, W. C. Darmody, E. R. Correll and Howard Burns.

John's Also Due at the Capitol

The Olney's Carradine Feels Time Creep Up On His 'Hamlet' Hopes

By Richard L. Coe

JOHN CARRADINE is what people call a "character."

He is, in short, himself. Though conformity is one of the rules of society, Carradine becomes conspicuous by following Polonius' advice: "To thine own self be true and it must follow as the night the day, thou canst not be false to any man."

John Carradine

But the blue-eyed, wraith-like villain of all those films also has the average qualities of Mr. Wallace's Common Man. Now out at Olney, he's touring the summer theater circuit with his wife, Sonia Sorel, in "A Bill of Divorcement." Touring, that is, in the family car with their three-month-old son, Christopher, and a nurse. "You take me," he seems to have said to the summer theater managers, "and you also take my family."

They arrived at Olney's Anchorage at 4 o'clock the other morning. "Who's there?" called a voice from within to the knocks on the portal. In the booming voice of an acknowledged exhibitionist, the still night was shattered with the cry, "Carrrrrrrradeeeeen!"

When the voice within told us about this, we couldn't help wondering what would have happened if the scene had taken place outside the home of the Capitol's Gene Ford, since Carradine also will be on the Capitol's screen Thursday in "The Private Affairs of Bel Ami." Probably the same come-on-in welcome, we guessed.

Possibly because we first saw him in "Stagecoach," Carradine always has struck us as living in the wrong century. He should have existed in the days of the two Edwins, Booth and Forrest, and toured the Nation wrapped in the long black cloaks of the Shakespearean actor Carradine so longs to be, rolling up to some frontier town in the early dusk and swaggering into the Last Chance saloon, with the Scarlet Lily perched on the bar singing, like as not, "See What the Boys in the Back Room Will Have."

Has Barrymore's Sets

Yes, those were the right days for Carradine. It's not right for him to be driving a Cadillac and dining on the Washington roof. But he's not giving up on Shakespeare.

Miss Sorel, who is possibly the more practical of the two, is convinced that the right backer (a man with $40,000 to invest) would find their tour a sound business investment. "In Los Angeles," she remarks, "we did even better than Maurice Evans." Hence, with their hopes on a trans-America tour next season, the Carradines are being as frugal as their imposing menage permits. What they can scrape together from their full summer schedule and some of John's "quickie" movies will go into their Shakespearean jackpot.

Obsessed by Hamlet

Like the traditional comedian who wants to play a tragic role, Carradine is literally obsessed with acting "Hamlet." His role of Hilary Fairfield in the Olney's "Bill of Divorcement" is a juicy one, which you may recall from John Barrymore's performance. But it's another Barrymore part, the brooding Dane, that sets Carradine conversationally airborne.

Age has something to do with it. John frankly admits to his 40 years and moans that if he puts off his "Hamlet" tour much longer he'll be too old for the part. Which is, alas, so right.

For as John Gielgud was saying a few weeks ago, Hamlet is a young man's role. John said: "I started playing 'Hamlet' at 26 and I've played more than a thousand performances. Now I'm 43 and if you take 43 as Hamlet's own age that makes his mother 60 at the very least by the most tolerant reckoning, and no woman of 60 in her right mind is going to carry on around Elsinore the way that Gertrude of Denmark does in the script.

"That was all very well for the matinee idols of the '80s to keep right on playing bobby-sox roles when they were tottering ancients. It was a romantic era and romanticism overweighed that sort of thing. But in this age it's plain comical."

A Hollywood Story

Evidently Carradine agrees, which is part of the reason we feel it's too bad he had to live in this realistic age of ours.

Not that he isn't hep to us, though. He's an afficionado of our ways, likes to tell of our modern habits. In exchange for one of our best stolen yarns he told us of the Hollywood movie actor's wife who enjoyed doing her housework dressed in nothing at all. She was garbed like this in her kitchen one day when the doorbell rang. She scooted for the laundry closet and called out: "Come in!"

The visitor came in—and headed right for the laundry closet, since he was, to be sure, the laundryman. The closet door opened and there she was. "Oh dear," the lady cried, covering her confusion with both hands, "I thought you were the ice man!"

ANN DVORAK, who hasn't been around on the screen lately, comes back to the Capitol Thursday morning in a film inspired by Guy de Maupassant, "The Private Affairs of Bel Ami." George Sanders is the chap who has the affairs and Angela Lansbury is another of them

Torch Bearer Learns When to Put It Down

ROMANCE DEPT.: The other night a producer whose girl had just broken their engagement entered Toots Shor's and sought solace from Jimmy Cannon. "I've never carried a torch before," he began. "What should I do about it?" . . . "The Torch," Cannon told him, is the common cold of the heart. There is no cure; it's got to take its course." . . . "When do I know that it's over?" asked the producer . . . "It's over when you walk into a restaurant and no longer see a girl who looks like Her from the back," said Cannon. "It's over when the phone rings while you're shaving—and you complete the full stroke of the razor."

Diego Rivera

POLITICS: Diego Rivera, who sheltered Leon Trotsky in Mexico, tried to avoid a split with him but, Rivera explains, it was inevitable. "I disagree with Trotsky," said the Mexican artist, "but I didn't ask him to say that I was right. After all, one shouldn't ask the father of a political ideology to condemn his own creation." . . . The blow-off came when Trotsky told Rivera: "I've heard that you maintain that war might never end in the world. A Marxist fundamental is that war results from the fight between the different social classes. With the establishment of a classless society, the reasons for war disappear. That's Marxism." . . . "If I don't believe in God," replied Rivera—a reply which ended their friendship—"why should I believe that Marx is infallible?"

LABOR DEPT.: Ed Corsi, the New York State Industrial Commissioner, will spend the summer in New Year conducting open hearings for the revision of the State's minimum wage structure. "It's antiquated," said Corsi. "Why, it goes 'way back to 1938" . . . Last week Corsi held hearings on minimum wages for the beauty parlor industry. He heard a beautician testify: "The lifespan of beauticians is 10 years less than in other professions" . . . "Why is that?" asked the commissioner. The beautician explained: "Because we work with women."

Big Business Lobby Riding Tax Saddle

By Drew Pearson

When it comes to taxes, the big-business lobby never changes. A peek behind-the-scenes with the House Ways and Means Committee shows that the same group of wire-pullers who have tried to mould taxes in the past are more in the saddle than ever today.

Hanes

Here is how they operate: Three years ago, Randolph Paul, then Counsel of the Treasury Department, was asked to meet with five men described to him as "controlling the tax policy of the United States." When he sat down with them, he found that these five were:

1. Wall Street Banker John W. Hanes, chief owner of the Martin Aviation Co., investor in various big tobacco companies, and the largest orchid-grower in the world.

2. J. Cheever Cowdin, head of the National Association of Manfacturers' tax committee, chairman of Universal Pictures and Trans-World Airlines; director of Curtiss-Wright, Douglas Aircraft, Sperry Gyroscope, Ford Instrument Co., Waterbury Tool and half a dozen others.

3. Ellsworth Alvord, tax lobbyist for the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and former tax lawyer for Andrew W. Mellon.

4. Lewis Brown of the Johns-Manville Co.

5. Roswell Magill, Wall Street tax lawyer.

This is the little group which described themselves as "controlling U. S. tax policy." And while they had little luck with Randolph Paul, today they have finally come into their own. It has recently been discovered that Republican Chairman Knutson of the House Ways and Means Committee has now actually appointed three of the above—Cheever Cowdin, John Hanes and Roswell Magill—as a tax committee to advise Congress on how to write the tax law.

In other words, Mr. Cowdin, a multimillionaire, and Mr. Hanes, another multimillionaire, together with Mr. Magill, an attorney for several millionaires, now are given the official right to help fix the Nation's taxes.

Unhappy Chandler

BASEBALL Commissioner Happy Chandler, once a versatile Senate debater, has been on a lot of hot spots in his day. But it took the 9-year-old son of Broadway Columnist Leonard Lyons to put him on another.

Having heard that Leonard Lyons' two sons were up in arms over the suspension of Brooklyn Dodgers' manager, Leo Durocher, Happy sent the two boys a note which read:

"It grieves me to know that you do not approve of my action in suspending Leo Durocher. But I am sure that if you were familiar with all the facts, you would agree that my action was in the interest of baseball. I have no other interest except to preserve the integrity of our national pastime."

To which George Lyons wrote back:

"Poppa was right in telling you that we don't think you did right in suspending Leo Durocher. Poppa explained to us the part of your letter where you said 'I am sure that if you were familiar with all the facts that you would agree that my action was in the interest of baseball.'

"I am 9½ years old. My brother Warren is 7. We play baseball and follow all the scores. We sometimes see games and root for Joe DiMaggio and for the Dodgers. So according to how Poppa explained what you said, I think we are the interest of baseball and the future of baseball. So could you please send us a few facts that maybe would tell us why you were right in suspending Leo Durocher.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

IF WALTER MASTERSON IS viewing the world through rose-tinted glasses, it is completely understandable because (1) he has pitched 25 consecutive scoreless innings for the Nats and (2) he wears rose-tinted glasses.

POVICH

Masterson is a hot article in the current rating of American League pitchers after going sixteen scoreless innings against the White Sox and then shutting out the Tigers, 1-0, in his last two starts. As for the glasses he wears, it was an optician who decided the color. Masterson's original decision to wear specs stemmed from the advice of Bucky Harris, his 1940 manager, who noted that his kid right-hander was squinting at the batters.

Not only was Masterson having a horrible time getting his pitches over the plate, but he was having some trouble ducking line drives. When he confessed to Harris that his vision was somewhat blurred, Harris reacted like the realist he is and, explaining that a baseball is a very rough object to get hit with, told Masterson "You'd better get some glasses before you get killed."

MASTERSON TOOK HARRIS advice and succeeded in saving his life, but somehow his pitching never improved. In his nine seasons with the Nats, allowing for the three years he spent in the Navy, his best feat was staying in the big leagues without winning ball games. In five full years with the Nats and part of a sixth, Masterson won a total of only 20 victories, and among the other ballplayers of the league the delusion was he had married the boss' daughter.

When the manager of another American League Club was discussing the Nats in Florida last spring, he was appraising the Washington pitching staff without mention of Masterson. When the pitcher's name was introduced to the discussion, he airily dismissed Masterson as no help to the Nats. "There's a guy," he said, "who's had a 9-year tryout, and hasn't made good. He's another Bobby Burke."

Burke, you remember, once pitched a no-hitter for the Nats, and apparently on the strength of that job, hung around for six more years. Masterson, until this season, had managed to win at widely-spaced intervals in such impressive fashion as to deserve retention, and no more. This year it is a far different story. With less than a fourth of the season complete, he's already won five games, as many as he ever won in a full year in the majors.

ONE THING WAS ALWAYS apparent about Masterson, from the moment the Nats scraped him off the Philadelphia sandlots as a fuzzy-cheeked kid of 18 in 1938—he had a fast ball. Joe Cambria plucked him from under the nose of Connie Mack and in lieu of a bonus, the Nats promised to let him travel with the club for the rest of the year, just like a big leaguer, although he never got into a ball game. In batting practice, he showed he could rear back and throw that apple.

Bucky Harris gave him his first big league start in May, 1939, and no rookie ever broke in much more impressively. He let the Tigers down with 6 hits and licked 'em, 4 to 1. Harris wondered what sort of a prodigy he had come up with. He didn't wonder long, though. Masterson won exactly one more game the rest of the season, and was shunted back to the bench.

So intrigued, however, was the Washington management with the possibilities of Masterson's fast ball that they not only tabbed him for future reference, but took steps to legitimatize his signing. In fear that Judge Landis' office might consider the signing of Masterson direct from the sandlots as irregular, they shipped him to Charlotte for two games. The fact that he lost both starts didn't deter the Nats from rebuying him before the season ended.

AGAIN, IN 1940, MASTERSON turned in a somewhat memorable false alarm of his incipient greatness. They shoved him into a relief job in Boston in April. He pitched four innings, held the Red Sox to one hit, struck out Ted Williams, Jimmy Foxx and Bobby Doerr in succession and was the winning pitcher. The tinsel wore off, however, a bit later. He won only three games that year, and lost 13.

One thing about Masterson—he never gave up on himself. He always said he'd quit, before he would go back to the minors, and at the risk of being rated a fresh busher he wasn't above brushing the hitters back with a dust-off ball that could whistle. The paradox is that his best pitch now isn't his blazing fast one, but the new-found curve that he can get over the plate with more frequency than his hard stuff.

The league's hitters know Masterson as a rough guy to deal with, and he's rather famous among the talent for the incident of last season when he faced Bill Dickey, the senior-grade lieutenant of Pearl Harbor days who, the boys said, pulled his rank. The first time he faced Dickey after the war, Masterson not only brushed Dickey back with a high, hard one, but stuck it against the shoulder blade of the former two-striper, shouting, "that's one for all the boys."

Moore Mauls Sheppard in Easy Victory

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Archie Moore gave Curtis (Hatchetman) Sheppard one of the most punishing defeats ever administered in a Griffith Stadium ring last night as he clubbed his way to a walkaway 10-round decision.

Outweighed 23 pounds, Moore chopped the Hatchetman down to his size in the early going and then filled the blubbery, lumbering Baltimorean's face and body with a crescendo of lefts and rights which left him a bloody, bewildered and battered hulk at the end of the savage beating.

Sheppard's left eye, swollen before the fight, was ballooned up to orange size by the rat-a-tat volley of razor sharp right hooks which the St. Louis light heavyweight contender landed.

There was only one knockdown—in the eighth—when Sheppard took a six-count from a right to the eye, but the fight was so one-sided that Moore himself asked Referee Harry Volkman to halt it in the tenth.

Sheppard Kept Off Balance

Sheppard, at 198½ against Moores' 175, offered little more opposition than a heavy punching bag. Moore kept him off balance all night and only twice was the Hatchetman in position to fire his best shot—his ham-like right.

Once was in the fourth. Sheppard had his fist cocked as Moore bounced against the ropes, but the clever Archie whipped a lightning right to Sheppard's left eye and Sheppard was foiled. In the seventh Sheppard landed a glancing long right off Moore's jaw which, if it had landed solidly, might have chilled Moore.

Sheppard hurt Moore only once—in the sixth when he shot a hard left hook to Moore's jaw which slowed up the St. Louis fancy-dan for a moment.

That and the constant assortment of punishment he threw at

Rizzuto's Bunt Scores DiMaggio

New York, June 16 (AP).—The New York Yankees defeated the Chicago White Sox, 4-3, tonight scoring the winning run in the ninth inning on a perfectly executed squeeze bunt by Phil Rizzuto which enabled Joe DiMaggio to cross the plate.

A crowd of 52,633 saw the Yankees stretch their American League lead to a game and a half over the idle Detroit Tigers and Boston Red Sox.

A two-run triple by Tommy Henrich, which chased two Yankees over the plate in the eighth, sent the teams into the ninth deadlocked at 3-3. Joe DiMaggio opened the ninth with a double.

George McQuinn was purposely passed. Bill Johnson sacrificed, whereupon Larry Berra drew another intentional pass, setting up the squeeze. Rizzuto's bunt toward first went for a hit as no play could be made.

The Sox scored one run in the first against starter Frank Shea, Dave Philley scoring all the way from first when Johnny Lindell fumbled Luke Appling's single. Bob Kennedy's triple and Cass Michael's single made it 2-0 in the sixth and Jack Wallaesa poled his fifth home run with the bases empty in the eighth.

Grace Lenczyk Leads Field

Atlanta, June 16 (AP).—Grace Lenczyk, a smooth-stroking youngster from Newington, Conn., showed the way to the Nation's top women golfers here today for medalist honors in the Women's Western Open Golf Tournament with one-over par 77.

Miss Lenczyk, whose previous claim to fame was a first-round victory over Mrs. Babe Didrikson Zaharias in the National Open last year, had a one-stroke advantage over defending Western Champion Louise Suggs of Lithia Springs, Ga., and three other favorites.

Tied for second place at 78 were Suggs, Polly Riley of Fort Worth, trans-Mississippi champion; Betty Jameson of San Antonio, and Dot Kirby of Atlanta.

Patty Berg of Minneapolis, the National Open champion, fired a 79 over the Capital City course, after having trouble on the greens. She required 40 putts.

Dot Kielty of Los Angeles, another pretournament favorite, finished with 80, while Helen Detweiler, formerly of Washington, D. C., and now of Indio, Calif., the 1939 winner, posted an 83.

Graziano TKOs Fiorello In 5th

Toledo, Ohio, June 16 (AP).—Middleweight Contender Rocky Graziano of New York won a technical knockout over Jerry Fiorello of Brooklyn in the fifth round of a scheduled 10-rounder before an estimated 6,000 fans at Swayne Field tonight. Graziano weighed 159½; Fiorello 158½.

Referee Barney Ross stopped the fight at 1:30 of the fifth frame, ruling that the Brooklyn battler would be unable to contiune because of a deep cut over his left eye.

Absorbing punishment from Rocky's two-fisted attack, Fiorello gamely refused to drop to the canvas and was attempting to stage a rally when Ross awarded Graziano the TKO victory.

Diffenbaugh Wins Maryland Pro-Am

Frederick, Md., June 16 (AP).—George Diffenbaugh, of the Kenwood club, Bethesda, won a pro-amateur golf tourney sponsored by the Maryland State Golf association at Catoctin club today with a score of 72, or two over par for 18 holes.

The pro sweepstakes was taken by Carroll Boggs, of the Cumberland Country Club, who came in with a card of 71.

Fifty-three started the play, including 38 amateurs and 15 pros.

The low amateur entries included G. R. Borsari, who had a 64 net; Eddie Semler, 64, and R. J. Hereford, 70, all of the Kenwood club, who toured the course with Diffenbaugh.

Semler had the low gross for amateurs—a 73.

Other pro entries:
Andy Gibson, Country Club of Maryland, 73; Al Houghton, Prince George's country club, 75; Al Jamison, Quantico, Va., 75; Jimmy Flattery, Forest Park country club, 75; Walter Bailey, Prince George's Club, 75; Ralph Beach, Suburban Country Club, 75.
Irvin Schloss, Mount Pleasant Club, 76; John Flattery, Green Spring Valley Hunt Club, 77; Bob Grove, Catoctin Club, 79; Carroll MacMaster, Woodholme Club, 80, and John Musser, Alister Club, Baltimore, no card.

Newsom Talks Himself Into Meeting Feller

For the hot-stuff Nats, reimbued with first-division fever, the target for tonight is Bob Feller of the Cleveland Indians, and fifth place.

The Nats are entrusting a three-game winning streak to Buck Newsom, the character, who with characteristic indiscretion but complete faith in Newsom, volunteered for tonight's assignment.

The prospect of a Newsom-Feller duel, promising theatrics as well as good pitching, has stimulated the Griffith Stadium advance sale to a point where a crowd of 25,000 is expected.

At this point, the Nats are in high favor with their customers, following the double victory of Sunday when they knocked the Detroit Tigers out of the league lead, with a continuation of the brilliant pitching that has offset the lack of power at bat.

Feller Has 8 and 5

Feller thus far has broken even in two decisions with the Nats this season. He was licked in Cleveland on the Nats' first Western trip when he essayed a relief role with the score tied at 1-1, but turned in a 6-2 victory in his most recent appearance against Washington.

In deference to the right-handed pitching of Feller, Manager Ossie Bluege will bench Tom McBride as his left fielder and install the left-handed hitting Joe Grace in that post.

Newsom will not carry into the game as impressive a record as Feller, who has won eight and lost five this season, but his last outing was a hard-luck 1-0 defeat by the Browns, on an unearned run. Newsom has won only two of his seven starts.

Manager Bluege yesterday announced that he is through experimenting with the Nats' third base job and will play Rookie Eddie Yost at the position "for the rest of the season, I hope." Bluege, already smitten with Yost's defensive play, is noting the recent improvement in the rookie's hitting.

The Nats' chief concern at this time is the hitting slump of Buddy Lewis whose average has receded to .314 after an early-season splurge in the .340's. With Lewis failing to get his hits at a time when Mickey Vernon is still shackled by a hitting slump, the Nats' pitching is heavily burdened.

Clark Griffith yesterday responded to the cries of help from his Chattanooga farm club by releasing Pitcher Luther Knerr to the Lookouts on option. Big Knerr, unimpressive in his few relief appearances with the Nats, according to Griffith is overweight and needs more frequent work. But not with the Nats.

Happened Twice Before

Lew Worsham Makes a Habit Of Beating Snead in Pinch

WHEN Lew Worsham overhauled Sammy Snead on the final two holes of their playoff for the National Open championship Sunday at St. Louis, it wasn't the first time the Washington pro had collared the Slammer.

Lew did it on two other occasions, both this year. The first time was in Hampton, Va., in April where Worsham successfully defended his Mid-Atlantic PGA crown.

Snead led Worsham at the end of 36 holes by two strokes, 139 to 141. They were paired for the final 36 and Lew came home with two par 72's for a 285 while Snead skyrocketed to 74-76 and a fat 289.

Only last week in Prince Georges in the National Capital Open Snead held a five-stroke lead over Worsham at the end of 36 holes, 131 to Lew's 136. Lew chopped that down on the third 18 with a 68 against Snead's 73. On the final 18, they played together again and each scored 69 for a 273 and a tie for fourth money.

AND Sunday's dramatic episode on the final playoff hole wasn't the first time Lew showed golfing knowledge when he called for a measurement.

A related incident also took place at Prince Georges on the seventh hole of the final round. Snead, his leadership lost on earlier holes, hooked his tee shot into the rough and the ball landed in casual water between two trees.

Sam wanted to move the ball out of the water—permissible enough—but in so doing also wanted to get a better shot at the green, moving the ball away from in between the two trees.

Worsham, on the other side of the fairway, saw what was happening and insisted that Snead either play the ball where it was or move it back out of the water, but still between the two trees.

Snead played the ball out of the water and he hit one of the finest shots of the tournament—a brilliant three-iron shot which carried to the fringe of the green.

Washington's Worsham is definitely on the ball when he's doing business with that Snead man!

Cards Defeat Phillies, 4-3

St. Louis, June 16 (AP).—Those rejuvenated St. Louis Redbirds continued their winning ways tonight as they grabbed a 4-to-3 10-inning decision from the Philadelphia Phillies for their fifth straight victory since returning home.

The winning run came when Red Schoendienst singled and scored all the way from first when John Wyrostek fumbled Terry Moore's single to right field.

Former Yankee Dies

Dodgers Clip Chicubs, 2-1

Chicago, June 16 (AP).—Brooklyn cracked a five-game losing streak and elbowed Chicago out of a chance to tie Boston for the National League lead today with a thinly sliced 2-1 victory over the Cubs on Rookie Harry Taylor's six-hit pitching.

Both Dodger runs were unearned, coming as a result of errors by First Baseman Ed Waitkus in the second and fifth innings. Those two boots were enough to give Taylor his fourth win at the expense of Doyle Lade, promising Chicago freshman.

Snead Has 66, Worsham 77 On PGA Course

Detroit, June 16 (AP).—Sammy Snead finally got the best of Lew Worsham here today—but it was little consolation to the Slammer.

The two top pros, who finished in a tie for the National Open, with Worsham winning the playoff, shot a practice round over the Plum Hollow course, scene of the PGA starting Wednesday, and Sammy came out much the better of the two.

Snead fired a 66 over the 6907 course, just two strokes off the course record held by Sam Byrd, while Worsham, the Open champ, came in with a 77.

The Virginian, winner of the PGA title at Atlantic City in 1942, powered the ball a long ways off the tees for nines of 33-33. His card included five birdies and two bogeys.

The first bogey was on the tough par 4 fourth, where his second was short and he failed to chip close enough. Three of the birdies were in a row, beginning with the 586-yard sixth, the longest hole on the course.

His spoon second was only 15 yards short of the green. Snead took three putts on the 12th for the other bogey.

Worsham teed off with Chick Harbert of Meadowbrook; Jimmy Demaret, former Plum Hollow pro and the year's biggest money winner, and Kansas Farmer Dick Metz.

Snead put together a pair of 33's for a six-under-par 66 this afternoon.

Clarence Doser of Hartsdale, N. Y., and Clayton Haefner of Charlotte, N. C., each had 68.

4 Times Up, Hits 4 Homers in Row

Rome, Ga., June 16 (AP).—Shorty Hall, third baseman for Lindale in the Northwest Georgia Textile League, yesterday hit four consecutive home runs in four consecutive innings off four different pitchers.

His team defeated Tubize Rayon 25 to 4.

All Crews at Poughkeepsie

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 15 (AP).—With the arrival of Wisconsin's Badgers late today, all 11 colleges which will compete in Saturday's renewal of the Poughkeepsie Regatta were on the scene and ready to buckle down to hard work.

Twenty-nine crews are due to drill tomorrow on the Hudson River, scene of the annual rowing classic which will be reviewed after a six-year wartime lapse.

Taking advantages of good river conditions, coaches sent their crews through long 4 or 5-mile workouts this morning and followed up with another stint later in the day, the busiest on the Hudson since June 25, 1941, date of the last race.

California's Bears, figured to be an important factor in the 3-mile grind, attracted considerable attention, going through a brisk workout after shaking off the effects of a four-day train excursion from the West.

Gullane, Scotland, June 16 (AP). Mrs. Mildred (Babe) Didrikson Zaharias, explaining "I'm sort of anxious to get back home" to her husband, said today that she had canceled plans to visit her ancestral home in Norway and will return to the United States shortly.

"I'll go on the Queen Elizabeth on June 25, if I can't get started sooner," she said.

14-Year-Old Buster Drives Batters Crazy With 'Knuckler'

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

ALTHOUGH THE NATS got rid of Dutch Leonard and Roger Wolff, those two venerable knuckleballers unknowingly gave rise to a youthful pitcher who is currently driving the kids crazy trying to hit his version of the knuckler.

The youngster is 14-year-old Buster Prusutti, star pitcher of the St. Francis Xavier School baseball team.

Last year Buster didn't play much baseball, but he spent a lot of time at Griffith Stadium watching the Nats. Two members of the team intrigued Buster, and he noticed that although neither of the men he watched intently had good records last season, when they were 'right', they were very effective.

Buster went home one afternoon after a ball game, and began practicing the knuckle ball. His progress was slow at first, as the knuckler is a very hard pitch to master.

But Buster wasn't discouraged, and he kept trying. He practiced throwing that knuckle ball all summer long, and when spring came around this year, he had learned how to make it do tricks.

Pitching for the St. Francis Xavier team this season, Buster won six out of the seven games he pitched. His masterpiece was a one-hitter against Holy Name, in which he fanned 12 men.

His coach, Bill Mann, says Buster's knuckler really dances and breaks, and adds that he has never before seen a boy Buster's age who could throw a real knuckle ball, much less control it.

BUSTER has plenty of assistance from his St. Francis Xavier team which won the CYO Section Three championship.

Husky Billy Bowells, the team's catcher, did a fine job of handling Buster's knuckle ball, and the second base-shortstop combination of Billy Money and Bill Roberts was a tower of strength all year.

First Baseman Earl Greer, playing his first season of baseball, and Third Baseman Martin Seiple were good defensive players as were Outfielders Jim Lynn, Ralph Brizzilo and Ken Valerio.

The utility men filled in capably when they were needed, and these boys—Stratton Laios, Tom McDonald, Jim Shea, Mike Harwood and Jim Harwood, never stopped trying.

"We had a fine defensive club," Coach Mann stated, "and although our hitting was weak, the boys' fine spirit kept us in there all season long."

And to prove his fondness for the lads he has coached for four years, Mann is taking the crew out to see the double-header at Griffith Stadium Sunday.

Maybe one of the other lads will pick up a knuckle ball or some other useful trick.

Pete Reiser Gets It Again, But This Time Walks Away

Chicago, June 16 (AP).—Everything happens to Pete Reiser. The Brooklyn Dodgers' battered outfielder, who recently suffered a head concussion in a collision with an Ebbetts Field wall, was standing in the outfield today during batting practice minding his own business, when Pitcher Clyde King caught a fly ball on the run, bounced into Carl Furillo and spun into Reiser.

Furillo, who saw King coming, was merely sideswiped. Reiser took the impact and went down badly shaken.

Batting practice was halted and Dodgers raced out to the prostrate Reiser in short left field. Somebody hollered for a stretcher but Reiser got up and walked off the field under his own power with his pal, Pee Wee Reese, at his side.

Trainer "Doc" Wendler said Reise'rs pulse was normal. That didn't go for Manager Burt Shotton whose Dodgers have lost five straight with Pete out of the lineup.

Jimmy Baird Turns in Four More Victories at Charles Town

Horseman

By Don Henderson

Upperville first day . . . what a day . . . never a greater gathering of good prospects and hunters in many a year.

Some of the green ones showed over-schooling at too high jumps. It's bad to get them going too high at first. Halfbreds were notable numerically and for class.

Barred Umber is a sire much used, and successfully. Spanish Jean, too. The Peach brothers and Ernest Redmon took all in halfbred yearlings, Redmon getting in on second with a Psychic colt. Model class placed Bill Star on top . . . a great individual, owned by McKennon of New York.

Miss Noland's Star-Topper, was third, with Clifton's Champ in between. Mrs. Barbin had a big toppy chestnut to win the lightweight 3-year-olds. Mrs. Fletcher Harper took the blue with a big bay Head Play from a chestnut, His Nibs. This book had him with more bone, better legs and front than the winner.

Redmon's Home Rule, a Flagpole, earned the halfbred 3-year-year-olds, though the showing of Ma-Jean was worthy. The warm-up turned out 40 head. Some of them were not ready for it, others were too warmed up, but those that did the job were great.

Clifton's Champ won, Prompt Payment Second—case of youth against experience. Miss Page Jennings' Icecapade is due a word; the Dunlin mare, Golondrina, from the Hamilton's, is honest and good. Daze will always catch the eye. Miss Crouse's Loyalhanna is nice and worthy.

Bogley and Yates Win Easily at Rye

Rye, N. Y., June 17.—Gil Bogley and Jack Yates of Landon School each advanced two rounds in today's play at the Manursing Island Invitation Tennis Tournament here today.

Neither Bogley nor Yates dropped a set in winning. Rusty Ballard of Landon won his first round match, but was eliminated in the second round, while Emerson Gardner of Landon was put out in the first round.

Apprentice Gunning for Riding Title

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., June 16. Apprentice Jimmy Baird, headed for the riding championship of the meeting here, booted Darling Grace home in the Congressional Country Club Purse, named for a group of Washingtonians from that organization who had an outing here today.

Darling Grace, owned by R. Winchester of Washington, led Mrs. Edna M. Deaner's Karakal into the wire by five lengths. In third position came Gene C. Dunaway's True Lass.

A field of eight competed in the test of six furlongs, plus 120 feet. Darling Grace paid $8.20 and was clocked in 1:19 4-5. Over a track that was drying out from Saturday's downpour but was in heavy condition.

Outlet Takes Lead

Outlet set the early pace with Darling Grace closest. On the backstretch, Baird took Darling Grace to the front and it was all over. True Lass rallied and then weakened and lost the place to the fast closing Karakal.

Baird, who rode four winners, started off the program with a winner. He was aboard G. C. Reid's Little Jaybo, a $12.20 shot who led Count Morvich and Mayfern to the wire. Those who coupled Little Jaybo with George P. Sherman's Hascout, the $6.20 winner of the second event, collected $48 in the Daily Double.

Palumbo Wins for Family

Jockey Sammy Palumbo, with his father, mother, wife and three children cheering him on, came from behind with Mrs. Mary Gheen's Ampie to win the fourth race at a $21.80 mutuel. His ride, a good effort, sent R. F. Duffy's Wrackfair into defeat. Third money went to A. Garisto's High Standard.

Baird rode his third winner in the seventh race aboard Mrs. L. A. Whitney's Scotty's Own. The 5-year-old won by three lengths with Smart Hombre second and First Girl third. Scotty's Own paid $7.00.

Colored Boy won by two lengths and paid $18.00.

Dear Folks:

The plane disaster happened within sight of this track at a point where a forest fire burned for days a few years back. The spot is locally known as Buzzard Roost. Eddie Fitzpatrick, operator of the camera finishes here, might have had the first pictures of the ill-fated plane but had to return to the track and his job after getting within a half mile of the wreck Saturday before noon. Don Patton of Winchester, who circled his cub plane to direct the searchers is a radio engineer and worked the controls for the broadcasts from the track for several years. One hundred and sixteen different horses have won races here with Sea Pilot the only triple winner. With Delaware Park having an off-day yesterday many of the owners and trainers of horses racing there took in the sport here. Favorite players have been doing well here but not as good as in some other seasons. To date 41 choices have gotten home in 128 races. Jimmy Baird continues to top the local riders with 15 winners. William Bell has taken over the riding engagements for Johnny Tammaro. Mrs. L. M. Carver purchased the filly Mlle Gino from Dan Chamblin and will race her at Delaware Park. See you on the rail . . . FIGHTS—From Page 17

Moore Beats Hatchetman

Sheppard in the first six heats tired Moore in the seventh, but he was back in the groove again in the closing rounds, splattering the Hatchetman with everything in the book.

The contest, if it could be called that, was so one-sided that ringside customers yelled for Referee Volkman to stop the massacre. D. C. Commission Doctor Halsted examined Sheppard's eye after his eighth round knockdown and pronounced the bloody Baltimorean fit to carry on.

It was a close fight with only one knockdown, in the fourth when the Baltimore invader sent Edwards to the canvas with a short left hook. Edwards got up before Referee Harry Volkman could begin a count, however. Edward weighed 197½, Mattriccini 211.

The Liberty Athletic Club production grossed $8,781.39. The Damon Runyon cancer fund, recipient of 10 per cent of the receipts, will realize approximately $700 from the show. Only 3105 fans saw the fight.

Heavyweight Bobby Jakes was awarded a first-round TKO over Billy Smith in the curtain raiser, scheduled for four. Referee Marty Gallagher halted the bout after 2:37 of one-sided milling.

Lightweight Billy Doerner, a marine, showed plenty of power in coasting to an easey five-round verdict over Joey Green, local boy.

Stonewall Jackson, 137½, gained the nod over Johnny Johnikin, 133, Brooklyn, in a six. Both were on the floor for short counts.

Riggs Wins Tennis Opener

Forest Hills, N. Y., June 16 (AP).—Bobby Riggs, the defending champion, swung into action today in the opening round of the National Professional Lawn Tennis championships and easily eliminated his first-round opponent, Igor De Nissoff, Stratford, Conn., in straight sets, 6—1, 6—1, 6—2.

Fifth-seeded Welby Van Horn, of Chattanooga, Tenn., defeated Harry Kenney, Hartford, Conn., with the same straight set scores.

Elwood Cooke of New York, making his initial appearance with the play-for-pay boys, set the pace by moving into the third round with a 6—2, 6—4, 6—2 triumph over George Hudson, Oakland, Calif., after both had drawn first-round byes.

Indian Spring Takes DWGA Title by Beating Army-Navy

Indian Spring golfers defeated Army and Navy, 7½ to 1½, at Woodmont to clinch the championship of the DWGA team play tournament which ended yesterday.

Indian Spring finished competition with 37½ points against 33½ for Manor, the second place club which defeated Congressional, 8½ to ½, yesterday.

Primo-Sexton In Fund Bout

The Damon Runyon Cancer Fund will receive 10 per cent of the gate receipts from a big wrestling show at Griffith Stadium under the Turner management on Wednesday night, June 25, it was announced yesterday.

Following a meeting yesterday with Clark Griffith, local chairman of the Runyon Cancer Fund Committee, the Turner officials announced that Frank Sexton, the recognized mat champion, and Primo Carnera, the former heavyweight boxing champion, would meet in a title bout.

In addition to the Sexton-Carnera match, the benefit show also will have two outstanding feminine wrestlers—June Beyers, from Dallas, and Elvira Snodgrass, the Tennessee hillbilly star.

Tomorrow night's wrestlers on the weekly card at Turner's Arena will be battling for places on the Carnera-Sexton card.

Babe Sharkey meets Emil Badui, the Arabian sheik, in the feature tussle, while Gino Garibaldi will oppose Billy Darnell in the semi-windup. Maurice LaChappelle will tackle Abe Stein. In other bouts George Bruckman will meet Jan Blears and Bill Hutchins will take on Joe Montara.

Out Fishing...

By Jack Bell

ORDINARILY, the first days of June are tops for fishing, both in local waters and waters to the north. However, old man weather has cast a spell of hard luck on all fishermen.

For the opening of Virginia's black bass season, Friday, June 20, anglers are faced with muddy water. Bass streams in Virginia and Maryland are running over the banks with water muddy enough to plant potatoes in!

Traveling northward to Quebec, Canada, three Treasury Department officials, Leon Siler, Public Relations; Elmer Acken, assistant to Assistant U. S. Treasurer Foley, and "Doc" Leland, Assistant Director of the Mint, encountered flooded highways and bridges which forced them to detour 100 miles in order to reach their destination. They were going to Charlie's Hunting and Fishing Club on the Gatineau and Lievre Rivers 200 miles north of Ottawa.

The Treasury fishermen had to spend much of their fishing time being "towed" by high-wheeled trucks to reach Charlie's. Despite the fact that flooded and washed-out trails kept them from reaching some of the club's best trout waters, they caught plenty of speckled beauties up to two pounds.

WORD out of the Maine woods has reached us from Mrs. Ethel Marden, wife of Luis Marden, traveler and photographer for the National Geographic Society.

Ethel says fishing in the Rangeley Lakes section has not gotten under way yet, and apparently is a month behind. She still has hopes of catching a speckled trout large enough to displace Luis' mounted beauty that now hangs over the most prominent spot in their apartment.

They are catching plenty of fish but small—best trout and salmon to date 2 pounds. They have two more weeks to go and now expect to get a break.

ROY SCHWAB, Washington policeman; Donald Rohwer, Edward Brown, Paul Knowlden, and John Hutton, all of Arlington, Va., are spending one week in the Kettle Creek section of Pennsylvania.

They had only two days of good trout fishing.

The first night on camp the spectre of hard luck struck when Hutton fell out of a double deck camp cot, hit a chair, breaking five ribs. John returned yesterday from the hospital at Purcellville, Pa.

Aussie Quits London Tennis

London, June 16 (AP).—John Bromwich, Australia's No. 1 net star, withdrew without explanation from the singles of the London grass courts tennis championships late today, three hours after beating India's Ghaus Mohammed, 6—, 6—3, in first round of play.

Two other Australians, Dinny Pails and Geoff Brown—scratched from the singles yesterday.

A moment after announcing his withdrawal to the referee, Bromwich waved away newsmen and announced:

All members of the Australian Davis Cup team were barred from giving interviews before they left home.

Colin Long, primarily a doubles player, was the only Australian left in the singles. He said tonight that he did not plan to withdraw.

Bromwich, Pails and Brown are all competing in the double along with Jack Kramer, American No. 1 and favorite to win the singles crown in the Wimbledon championships beginning next week. Kramer is ont competing in the London singles.

Truck Drivers, Clerk Indicted In $6742 Theft of Bedlinens

Four truck drivers and a receiving clerk were indicted yesterday for the theft of $6742 in bed linens from the Hecht Co.

The District grand jury charged that the clerk, Vincent T. Dameron, 24, of Maryland Park, Md., signed receipts at the store warehouse but allowed the drivers to leave with the sheets which they later sold. The drivers are Isaac Broady, 32, 486 K st. sw.; Walter E. Jones, 24, 1582 Simms dr., se.; Willard L. Henry, 29, 475 C st. sw., and Louis C. Thompson, 23, 1868 California st. nw.

Another indictment disclosed that Mrs. Harriett H. Pearce, wife of Capt. Robert Pearce, First Police Precinct, had a $135 watch stolen from her. Charged with the theft was Andrew Upshaw, 34, 1533 8th st. nw. He was employed by Mrs. Pearce to do some household chores for her on May 1.

Dwelling Thefts Charged

Another handyman, Smith M. Nightengale, 39, 913 3d st. ne., stole $1635 in money and jewelry from three dwellings where he worked last year, according to the indictments.

Woodrow W. Dickinson, 35, a marine engineer, was charged with not providing for his wife, Margaret, and their 19-month-old son, residing at 1119 Queens st. ne.

Walter Tyler, 46, of Toledo, father of four children, was the other to face the charge.

Theodore R. Lucas, 28, formerly of 1226 2d st. sw., was charged with fatally knifing the mother of a woman said to be his common-law wife. Police said that apparently Lucas was drunk May 16 when he returned to the mother's home where he had lived, and became abusive. Witnesses said the mother struck him with an iron bar before she was stabbed.

Slain by Lucas, according to the charge of second-degree murder was Mrs. Pearl McGilvery, 45. Her daughter, Mrs. Cleo E. Campbell, was injured during the affray but recovered.

The grand jury ignored homicide charges in the following traffic death cases:

Joseph P. Touma, 39, 4313 Kansas ave. nw., who had been charged in the death of Joseph Basile, 55, 809 Mount Vernon pl. nw.

World Faces Big Problems in Peace Pacts, Forrestal Tells Wellesley Grads

Wellesley, Mass., June 16 (AP).—Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal said today the world was faced with three problems, the first of which was the writing of just peace for Germany and Japan and the third a world disarmament.

The Secretary, in an address at graduation exercises at Wellesley College, asserted that between the writing of just peace treaties and disarmament came the task of "developing and strengthening of the United Nations."

"Once the treaties of peace are written," he said, "the energies of the United States must be directed to the restoration of broken economies and shattered confidence throughout the world. And if the world is to have such confidence, this Nation must retain its vitality, its optimism and its capacity for action.

"Fundamental to these is retention by the United States of military power, both immediate and potential, to make it clear that no aggressor can afford again to loose the curse of war."

Forrestal declared "it is not the existence of arms in the hands of people who desire peace that causes wars. It is rather the lack of them."

He then recalled the history of Germany since the days of Bismarck, during which England "made unceasing efforts to arrive at an accommodation with Germany," adding that the efforts failed "because Germany did not wish to accept the status quo of Europe."

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

PAYLESS PAYDAYS: The possibility still faces Federal workers. The rider adopted by the House last week would not prevent them. This is the opinion of top Government budget officers and it's agreed to by Capitol Hill officials. This is the situation:

The regular appropriation bills will not be law by June 30, the deadline. That's admitted by all since not a single bill has cleared Congress. In anticipation of this snafu, the House approved a provision which would permit agencies to incur debts after June 30 until their supply bills become law.

It was generally believed this provision could be used to pay salaries. But the rider says nothing about paying debts, only "incurring" them. Therefore, it has been informally decided that salaries couldn't be paid and that the rider is a "joker." But now that it has been discovered, the Congress will be urged to approve a measure which would specifically say that salaries are to be paid.

INTERIOR: Several hundred additional employes will have to be laid off even though this department gets every dime of the big increase recommended by the Senate. But on the other hand, a hundred or so who have been laid off would be called back to work under the Senate bill. This is the picture:

Cuts made by the House would require the department to fire more than 7000 employes. However, provisional notices went out to about 3600 people of whom 900 are in this city. At the maximum, officials say, the Senate bill would add about 2000 jobs which would mean a lay-off of about 5000 people.

Further, the Senate bill would require additional reductions in the personnel division since it limits to a million dollars the money that can be spent for personnel work. Reclamation spends about $700,000 alone. Also, the department was limited to $42,500 for information work which means cut here.

But the Senate would restore three small units here that the House refused to continue. They are: the power division, oil and gas division, and the division of geography. These are additional Senate increases:

Secretary's Office, $103,000; solicitor, $15,460; land management, $458,940; geological survey, $1,143,-10; Indian Affairs, $4,855,467; mines, $1,902,975, and fish and wildlife, $505,440.

NLRB: John C. Shover, after a long hitch in the Army, is back as personnel officer of the Labor Board . . . FBI: The Senate-approved bill which would allow FBI agents to retire at 50 after 20 years of service was delayed in the House yesterday . . NATIONAL HOUSING: Even Ray Foley, NHA boss, was given a super-duper dismissal notice (as a gag) at a staff meeting. All other NHA employes, about 180, were given provisional layoff notices. The House gave the agency $100,000 and it requires about $300,000 merely to pay for its penalty mail.

STORY: Among the employes of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics who were laid off without an hour of on-the-job notice were Harry Norcross and Chester Glickson, both economists. But both men have been going to the office every day since as if nothing had happened. They are donating their time. In fact, on the hottest day of the year last week, Norcross returned to his office after dinner to work until midnight.

CEILING: Budget Director James E. Webb yesterday fixed a tentative ceiling of 2,057,794 on Federal personnel for the first quarter of the 1948 fiscal year to start July 1. This is a reduction of 4,000 from the revised June 5 ceiling, and 461,000 under the ceiling of a year ago.

However, Webb explained that the new ceiling would not require any new major lay-off in addition to those already under way and planned.

TURNOVER: If it's any comfort to Federal job seekers, Civil Service now predicts the turnover rate in the Federal service will be 2½ per cent a month for the 1948 fiscal year. This means that about 500,000 people will be recruited to fill the jobs of those who leave the service. About 500,000 replacements are expected to be hired here in the next year.

VETERANS: The Senate Civil Service Committee today will look into the replacement of civilians by military people in the War and Navy Departments. Yesterday it looked into complaints of firings and downgradings of veterans in the Brooklyn and Boston navy yards.

HURT IN COLLISION—Mrs. Patricia Kelser, 18, of 107 Sunnyside rd., Silver Spring, receives first aid while awaiting removal to Emergency Hospital after she was injured when the car in which she was riding with her husband, Herbert M. Kelser, 19, left, and his brother, Raymond E. Kelser, 18, driver of the vehicle, overturned after a collision at 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., last night

High Schools' Driving Lesson Lag Questioned

Advisory Board Asks School Head To Explain Delay

The Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Board last night asked Schools Supt. Hobart M. Corning to explain failure to expand driving instruction in District high schools.

The action followed two assertions made at last night's Advisory Board meeting:

1. That the schools superintendent has failed to reply to the month-old offer of the Washington Automotive Trade Dealers Association to provide free of charge eight dual-control training vehicles to the schools.

2. That the schools offer only two driving courses, although Congress has appropriated funds for teachers (but not cars) for four such courses.

"I think it's an outrage," Washington I. Cleveland, a member of the advisory board's education and public information committee, asserted.

F. L. Haller, head of the dealers association and member of the board, said his association had received no word from the superintendent

The Advisory Board gave its approval to a list of collateral revisions in traffic cases recommended by Chief Judge George P. Barse of Municipal Court. Under the revisions, to be effective July 1, the collateral for jaywalking will be raised from $2 to $5.

It also authorized use of certain unexpended funds in its education committee budget for an intensive child safety campaign.

George E. Keneipp, director of vehicles and traffic, outlined a five-year traffic sign replacement program which, he said, will cost $57,000 a year. Keneipp also told the board the District traffic permit suspension and revocation office has a three-month backlog of cases as result of a 171 per cent increase in the number of suspensions. He said there were 7046 suspensions during the past 11 months compared to 2596 in all 1946.

Plan Removal

Unnecessary Stop Signs Held Hazard

Unnecessary stop signs teach motorists to disregard essential signs and the result is accidents, George E. Keneipp, director of traffic, said yesterday.

Keneipp was among officials and citizens testifying yesterday at the Commissioner's public hearing into removal of stop signs at 29 "isolated intersections" in the Sixth and Eighth Precincts.

Supporting Keneipp in the program to remove the signs were the Capital Transit Co., the Keystone Automobile Club and the Washington Automotive Trade Association.

Manor Park, American University Park, Brightwood and Hampshire Citizens Association opposed removal of signs in their areas.

Testifying that there is "an alarming decline in voluntary compliance" by motorists to stop signs, Keneipp said that "lost effectiveness of the signs can be recaptured by removal of unwarranted signs and strict enforcement of those which remain."

Senate Votes To Use Hotel As Court Annex

The Senate voted yesterday to let the old Capitol Park Hotel be used as an annex to District Court, but passage of the bill in the House is unlikely.

Approval of the plan in the Senate was given by unanimous consent.

The bill now goes to the House for study by its Public Works Committee and Public Buildings subcommittee. The second group earlier voted to table other plans for using the hotel, and told the Federal Works Agency to sell it to the highest bidder.

The hotel, North Capitol and E sts. nw., was used during the war as the United Nations Service Center.

Senate Passes Bills to Restore Rights of D. C. Police, Firemen

Washington police and firemen would recover promotion and senority rights lost by military service under bills passed by the Senate yesterday.

Similar bills have cleared the House, but Senate changes sent both bills back there for final action.

One bill would let police and firemen, whose promotions were held up because they were in the service, hold their ranks from the date they would have obtained promotion by staying in the city departments.

The other bill would let military service be credited toward the amount of benefits they get from the police and firemen's relief fund.

The Senate also approved and sent to the White House a bill to repay three Washington police inspectors for the expense of running their private cars on official business.

The inspectors were paid $480 a year each for the fiscal years 1945 and 1946. A Comptroller General's ruling said basic law permitted payment of only $312 each for those two years, and $264 for the current fiscal year.

The bill would make the payment $480 for 1945 and every year afterward.

Nurse Killed, Three Hurt In Md. Crash

2 Motorcyclists Injured; 2 D. C. Children, Struck by Cars, Hospitalized

Nearby Maryland traffic accidents early yesterday killed a St. Elizabeths Hospital nurse, injured three other persons and sent two motorcyclists to the hospital with head injuries.

Miss Simon

In Washington, two children were hospitalized for injuries suffered when struck by cars about noon.

Dead after the car in which she was riding struck a tree on Crain hwy. is Miss Ardyce Simon, 25, of 4500 Livingston ave. se., a former Army nurse.

Also hurt in the accident were: Miss Anna Seman, 22, also a graduate nurse who lives at the Nurses' Home; Sergt. James Loudon of Bolling Field, and Sergt. Alton T. Hall, 27, of 4325 Taylor st. se., driver of the car.

Motorcycle Leaves Road

Donald G. Wood, 24, of 6802 47th st., Bethesda, and Bernard Dickens, 23, of 400 Lanark Way, Silver Spring. Both are in Casualty Hospital.

Hall, driver of the car in which Miss Simon was riding, told police he fell asleep. He suffered cuts on the face and knee and with Sergt. Loudon, was taken to Bolling Field Hospital. The car plunged from the road 3 miles north of Central ave.

Girl, 3, Injured

Dolores Plant, 3½, of 332 Seaton pl. ne., who was treated at Sibley Hospital for an injured left shoulder and bruised temple. Police said she darted from between two cars in the 300 block of Seaton pl. ne., and was struck by a car operated by Charles P. Reckert, jr., 24, of 3433 34th st. ne.

Edward Braxton, 11, of 649 N st. nw., was treated at Freedmen's for a fractured foot. He was injured as he crossed 7th and M sts. nw., when the truck, operated by Jerry Twyman, 52, of 1143 4th st. ne., ran over his foot.

Four persons were treated for injuries last night when a car operated by Reginald G. Ritchie, 19, of 713 E. Edison st., Arlington, Va., collided with a car operated by Raymond E. Kelser, 18, of 107 Sunnyside rd., Silver Spring, Md., at 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave., about 10 p. m.

Kelser, whose car overturned, was treated for contusions to the left knee. Mrs. Patricia Kelser, 18, his sister-in-law, was treated for contusions and lacerations to the ankles and legs, and John Bingham, 38, 2017 Luzerne ct., Silver Spring, also riding in the Kelsen car, was treated for lacerations to the left knee at Emergency Hospital.

Betty Owen, 29, of Durham, N. C., riding in Ritchie's car, was treated for contusions to the forehead.

Detective Chief Now Sporting Brand New Nose

The chief of the detective bureau is sporting a new nose.

Gone is the dent that inspector, Robert J. Barrett, acquired back in the days, when policemen frequently had to use and take fists in a fight with the tough underworld.

He made it clear yesterday, however, in an informal visit to police headquarters, that it was a necessity and not vanity which accounted for the change.

A sinus condition, resulting from an old injury to his nose caused him discomfort in breathing, he explained. So he paid a visit to Providence Hospital several weeks ago, where doctors took a piece of bone from one of his ribs and used it to build up his nose.

Judge Scores Prince Georges Continuances

Only 2 of 41 Cases Actually Tried in One Day's Session

Too many cases are being continued too many times in Prince Georges County police courts.

This was the charge made yesterday by Trial Magistrate Arthur P. Owens, currently sitting in the Hyattsville court, after only two of 41 scheduled cases actually were heard.

Judge Owens

Court was in session slightly more than half an hour, including the time for the clerk to read the docket.

Of the 41 cases scheduled yesterday, 25 were continued, five were dismissed for lack of prosecution, collateral was forfeited in nine and two were actually tried.

Among the cases continued was one of drunken driving and reckless driving, originally set for October 7, 1946, which was set back for the thirteenth time.

Judge Owens charged that many continuances are sought in the hope that the cases may never come to trial.

"If conditions do not improve I will be forced to hear cases in the absence of the defense attorney," the usually mild-mannered judge declared. "I do not say that all continuances should be eliminated, as many are justified. It is the useless, dilatory ones which break down court routine that I intend to curtail."

The number of continuances granted yesterday was unusually large as many lawyers were present at the opening session of the Prince Georges County Circuit Court in Marlboro, but from 10 to 15 cases are continued at each session of the Hyattsville Court.

Westchester Rent Increase Is Protested

About 100 tenants at the fashionable Westchester Apartments, 4000 Cathedral ave. nw., appeared before the District Rent Control Board yesterday to protest a proposed 17½ per cent rent boost.

They heard Rent Control Examiner Ernest Williams, at the opening of the all-day hearing, reject a petition of the Westchester attorneys to dismiss the case.

Argues for Dismissal

Ellis B. Miller, attorney for some 260 tenants in the 558-apartment development, argued for dismissal on the grounds the current owners have not had sufficient experience in operation to "justify" the requested rent hike. He said the petitioner, the Realest Corporation, purchased the property in February.

He said, furthermore, that the petitioner's request for a rent adjustment "with such a basis" constitutes a "speculative, manipulating practice," contrary to the District Rent Control Act.

Calls Motion "Premature"

Earnest F. Henry, counsel for the owners, retorted that the purpose of the act in to insure "rent control, not profit control." He labeled the dismissal motion "premature."

Owners of the development requested the increase because of allged boosts in maintenance and operating costs, prospective higher taxes and pending $250,000 improvement project.

Yesterday's witnesses included Paul Oehmann, accountant for the management, and Walter D. Binger, vice president of the City Investing Co., which owns the Realest Corp.

Plans for Memorial Approved by Senate

The Senate yesterday completed congressional action on a joint resolution permitting a memorial to the First Infantry Division of World War II to be built in the District.

It also approved and sent to the House a joint resolution to erect a memorial to the Marine Corps dead of all wars here. Both memorials would be put up without Federal expense.

Ex-Actress Wins Judgment Of $445,000 in Alimony Case

A one-time Hollywood actress obtained a $445,000 alimony judgment here yesterday against Charles H. Duell, jr., retired corporation executive, formerly of the Shoreham Hotel.

Justice David A. Pine of District Court, signed the judgment when Duell failed to appear personally to contest the suit brought five years ago by his divorced wife, Mrs. Elsie Lillian Tucker Duell of Hollywood.

The money includes interest dating back to 1923. Later that year, Mrs. Duell obtained a divorce in Paris.

Duell was termed fugitive by the court. However, his attorney claimed he lives in New York at present. His wife claims she has been unsuccessful in attempts to get him to appear in Washington.

The separation agreement provided for a $50,000 payment to Mrs. Duell plus $1500 a month for the rest of her life. She claims she has received only $3000.

Duell was described as a lawyer and one-time president of the Brisbane Box Co.

More than a year ago, District Court found him in contempt in failing to come to court and ordered him jailed for 30 days. However, since he could not be brought into this jurisdiction from New York on that charge, he has not served any sentence.

Smith Ready To Bar VA at Nevius Tract

Special Rule Will Let Him Kill Off Fund for Hospital

Representative Howard Smith (D., Va.) yesterday placed himself in strategic position to kill off the proposed veterans' hospital at the Nevius tract, on the Virginia side of Memorial Bridge.

Smith, who has opposed the Nevius site for the 15-million-dollar, 750-bed hospital, persuaded the House Rules Committee to adapt a special rule for amending the independent offices appropriations bill, slated to reach the floor today.

The measure, among other things, authorizes VA to spend 442 million dollars on hospital construction, and keeps in force VA contract authorizations.

The general terms of the bill cover the new hospital planned for the Nevius tract, recently condemned by the Federal Government and taken over by VA with the sanction of the courts. VA has offered $825,000 for the site, but the final price is to be determined by a condemnation jury.

The rule adopted yesterday permits any member of the House to offer amendments in effect striking out funds or contract authorizations for any particular site or for erection of any particular hospital.

The special rule was approved by the House Rules Committee after Representative Smith discussed the controversy aroused by selection of the Nevius tract, a selection personally made by Gen. Omar K. Bradley, VA director, and Dr. Paul R. Hawley, his medical chief. Arlington County officials oppose the move, saying the tract is an excellent site for a proposed apartment hotel and other good land is available for a veterans hospital.

Representative Smith told reporters yesterday that while the county "is very much opposed to the site," he still had not made up his mind to oppose it on the floor of the House.

The special rule is likely to set up a string of amendments concerning VA hospitals, since VA has been closing down recently acquired Army "surplus" hospitals in order to man newly-built VA hospitals.

General Bradley picked the Nevius site, adjacent to Arlington Cemetery and Fort Meyer, after considerable controversy over potential sites within the District.

House Unit Hears Rent Control Bill Arguments

Agrees District Curbs Should End When Restrictions Cease Nationally

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

A House District Subcommittee agreed yesterday that "for practical reasons" local rent controls would have to end on the same date that national rent restrictions are lifted.

The subcommittee opened hearings yesterday on a bill extending rent controls here to December 31, 1948. The present restrictions are due to terminate at the end of this year.

However, even Representative Thomas G. Abernethy (D., Miss.), author of the year's extension legislation, admitted that Congress was not likely to permit rent controls to continue longer in the District than in the rest of the country.

Compromise Ready

House-Senate conferees are due to report out today a compromise bill lifting rent controls all over the country—except in the District—on February 29, 1948.

Commissioner Guy Mason argued, nonetheless, that the situation in the Distrct was "entirely different." He insisted that the housing shortage here was as acute as ever; that rents would shoot up if controls were lifted; and that Federal workers would have to get a raise to meet the increased rents.

Rent Commissioner Robert Cogswell also urged a year's extension of rent control. The housing situation here, he said, "appears to be getting progressively worse instead of better," both in low and high rental accommodations.

Reilly Urges End

The Washington Board of Trade, represented by President John A. Reilly, urged an end to D. C. controls on the same date as the rest of the country.

The board, through Reilly, also vigorously opposed a bill to establish commercial rent controls here. The board's committee which studied the matter, Reilly said, concluded that complaints of rent gouging amounted to less than one-half of 1 per cent of all the renters of business property here.

Rufus S. Lusk, secretary of the Building Owners and Managers Association of Metropolitan Washington, branded proposed commercial rent controls as "pure economic insanity." He asserted that in certain parts of the city the office building vacancy rate is almost 5 per cent, and the store vacancy rate approximates 10 per cent.

Federation Urges Curb

Demand for commercial rent controls came from the Federation of Citizens Associations, and by several commercial tenants speaking for themselves.

Sidney Feldman, of 8206 Colston pl., Silver Spring, told the committee that "rent gouging" had forced him to sell the newstand he had built up at 15th and F sts. nw. Feldman said he first rented the store space with a 9-foot front, for $200 in 1944. Later the rent was raised to $350. More recently, he said, the rent was upped to $500, and he "just had to get out."

The Woodward Realty Co., which purchased the Woodward Building at 15th and H sts. nw., early this year for a reported 3½ million dollars, was vehemently scored by several tenants who appeared before the committee to ask protection against what they termed unreasonable rent increases.

From $290 to $397

Attorney E. Hilton Jackson said that the new owners of the Woodward Building raised his rent from $290 a month to $397, after first demanding $465. W. Gwynn Gardiner, a lawyer here for 46 years, said his rent was raised from $320 to $441, after the new owners had asked for $520. George E. Sullivan, also a lawyer, charged that his rent had been "jacked up" from $285 a month to $645.

David G. Berger, an attorney representing the Woodward Building owners, filed a statement with the committee to the effect that the increases were aske dto meet increased services and costs and to equalize rents throughout the building.

The hearings will be resumed tomorrow at 10 a. m. in the District Committee Room, Old House Office Building.

Postlude

Agi Jambor Acclaimed At Phillips

Agi Jambor, pianist, in works of Bach, Schumann, Kabalewsky, Gershwin, Philipp, Debussy, Weiner and Chopin. Monday evening, Phillips Gallery.

By Paul Hume

In her public debut in America last night at the Phillips Gallery, Agi Jambor, Hungarian pianist, showed herself to be a big pianist.

Such a description may properly be applied to a pianist with two attributes: spacious conception of the art of performance in music, and breadth of technique with which to realize that conception. Miss Jambor disclosed her profound musicianship at the outset of the evening as she delivered a towering reading of the Busoni transcription of the Chaconne from Bach's D minor sonata for unaccompanied violin. Such transcriptions are valid when performed in high taste and sensitive attention to Bach's line.

Her talents include also the rippling lightness for Schumann's fanciful pieces, and for Isidor Philipp's brilliant etude. A tremendous tone was superbly controlled throughout the recital, standing her in a particularly good stead in the last of three fine preludes from Dmitri Kabelewsky. This was true in the imposing sonorities of Leo Weiner's scholarly and beautiful Passacaglia which was one of the finest exhibits of pianism in our recently completed season.

Debussy's L'Isle Joyeuse is the sort of thing Miss Jambor can play to the hilt, for it requires great breadth. That she did not maintain the long line requisite for the work was due in no sense to technical shortcomings, for she seems to have none. It was rather the result of a slight hesitation or broadening out at moments when the music simply permits none. Closing a recital which had already placed her at the top of her field, Miss Jambor outlined an eloquent, beautifully proportioned reading of the B minor sonata of Chopin. For finesse and imaginative tempos, all within the bounds of real artistry, the sonata equaled any reading of it in years, and it is a work which appears regularly.

$1.20 Tax Rate Will Stand at Takoma Park

The Takoma Park City Council last night adopted a budget of $158,350 and voted to keep the city's tax rate at $1.20 per $100 assessed valuation.

The budget, effective July 1, is an increase of $21,390 over last year.

Salaries of the city's four policemen were boosted $390 a year each, in addition to their clothing allowance of $960 each a year. The annual salary of one officer will be $2670 and the three others will receive $2310.

Employment of an assistant superintendent of public works, a new position with an annual salary of $3000 is provided for in the budget.

Other salary raises for city employes are: electrical inspector, $120; building inspector, $300; assistant clerk, $240, and additional clerical help, $620.

The tax rate for the Takoma Park volunteer fire department was raised from 12½ to 15 cents, which increases the allotment for the department to $18,750. Last year it was $13,200.

The library association budget was increased from $5500 to $6250.

A new ordinance unanimously adopted prohibits the keeping of chickens and other domestic animals, with the exception of cats, dogs and household pets, within the limits of the town, effective 90 days from last night. Violators will be fined from $5 to $25.

The keeping of chickens has long been a problem and a controversial issue among residents.

Strong opposition was voiced by Leo R. Hubbard, representing 16 businessmen, against the city's recent approval of establishing parking meters July 1 along Carroll and Laurel aves. in the business area.

The council agreed to reconsider the action.

Jewish Appeal Gets Backing Of Churches

The full support of the Washington Federation of Churches was pledged yesterday to the Christian Committee for Washington of the United Jewish Appeal.

The national quota for the United Jewish Appeal is 170 million dollars, of which two million dollars is to be collected locally. The Christian Committee hopes to collect $200,000 toward the local quota.

Dr. Arthur S. Fleming, president of the Federation of Churches, said he hoped the Christians of Washington would do their part in helping relieve the tragic needs of the destitute Jews of Europe.

Dr. Fleming emphasized the urgent need that the liquidation of UNRRA and curtailment of other relief agencies has created.

Recent outbreaks of anti-Semitism in some eastern European countries has resulted in acts of violence against Jews which has led to a panic flight westward to DP camps.

Of the nine million Jews in Europe before the war there are today only about one and a half million survivors. Most of these are homeless and lacking in food and essentials.

As part of the church drive in Washington, members of congregations will be asked to make contributions next Sunday.

The Christian Committee, headed by Frank R. Jelleff and Carter T. Barron, has arranged a special dinner at the Statler Hotel next Tuesday night. Principal speakers will be Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, the Rev. Edmund I. Walsh, S. J., and Arthur Gaeth, newspaper correspondent.

THAT REFUND you'll be getting on your electric light bill can be used to aid little patients at Children's Hospital like Sandra Gregerson, 2, of 154 Yuma st. se., above. Just fill out the coupon

Assuming that each contributor is entitled to the top refund of $3.60, the institution's fund will be boosted by $4417.20.

It was the biggest response since the new plan for aiding the still under-subscribed Children's Hospital fund went into operation late last week. The $1,300,000 goal is short about $80,000.

Contributors, who have responded enthusiastically to the plan, agreed to permit refunds of electric bills paid months ago to be turned over to the hospital's fund. A coupon of authorization for the donations, which appears in today's Post, may be mailed to the company or to room 200 of The Post.

The refund procedure has been indorsed by both the Merchants and Manufacturers Association and the Washington Board of Trade. Receipts will be used by the hospital to construct a new, fire-proof building to replace the 25-year-old structure on W st. between 12th and 13th sts. nw.

Public Housing Sale Clinched

An "earnest" payment of $100,000 involving the sale of Farlington, McLean Gardens and a 180-unit development in Bremerton, Wash., yesterday was handed to Dillon S. Myer, commissioner of the Federal Public Housing Authority.

The check was presented to Myer by Ralph Tyler, Cleveland attorney representing the Fairmac Corp., headed by Leo F. Corrigan and Leland Fikes, of Dallas, Tex. The Fairmac Corp. was organized under Montana laws. Corregan is an apartment operator and Fikes an oil industrialist.

Following presentation of the check an executed copy of sale was signed. Total sale price of the properties is $43,600,000. The $100,000 payment will be applied to a down payment of four million dollars due before October 12.

The Defense Homes Corporation, a cog of FPHA, which owned the properties, will retain a 28-year mortgage at 2½ per cent.

The Government will get half the net earnings after April 1, 1952, and these funds will be applied against the principal.

The Farlington development comprises 3439 apartments in 579 buildings with an annual gross income of $3,013,000. The McLean Gardens grosses 1¼ million from 720 apartments in 31 buildings and 1192 furnished rooms in nine residence halls.

At Fairlington 4000 rental applications are on file with 50 vacancies occuring monthly. For McLean Gardens applications total 1100 with 3 to 10 vanacies monthly.

The buyers have agreed to rent to veterans "substantially all" apartments which become vacant up to January 1, 1950.

The three developments cost Defense Homes Corp. a total of $47,490,785.

The Bremerton development completed in 1942, cost $950,360; McLean Gardens was completed in the same year at a cost of $11,143,784; while Fairlington cost $35,396,640.

Miss Bradley Presented At Dance

THT CHEVY CHASE CLUB'S dance floor last night was given over to young couples invited to the debut of Miss Carolyn Bradley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick M. Bradley. Bunches of white flowers decorated small tables outdoors and green and yellow balloons added color to the gay scene. Sidney's orchestra played under the stars till small hours of the morning.

The pretty debutante wore a full-skirted dress of white starched lace, and a single orchid in her hair. During the receiving hours she carried a bouquet of red and white roses. Her mother was smartly costumed in gray with gold accessories.

Many out-of-town guests who had come down from New York for the debut last Friday evening of Miss Sherley Smith, stayed over for the dance of Miss Bradley. Among the debutantes at the affair were Miss Smith, Miss Beatrice Blair, Miss Ellen Bacon, Miss Suzanne Alexander and Miss Nancy Burdick—all graduates this June from Madeira School.

Another debutante, Miss Alberta Legare, gave a dinner beforehand at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Kent Legare. A dinner party was also given by Mr. and Mrs. Preston Delano at the Sulgrave Club. Miss Evelyn H. Maddox, Miss Sophie Finkenstaedt and Frederic Houghteling were among those who attended the latter party.

Mrs. Delano had originally planned the dinner in honor of her niece, Miss Ruth Sailor of Portland, Oreg., who has many friends in Washington. At the last moment, however, Mis Sailor got a coveted job in New Hampshire for the summer and was unable to come.

Miss Delattre-Seguy

Feted at Dinner

A DEBUTANTE of next winter, Miss Claire Delattre-Seguy, was honored last evening at a dinner party, given at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jean Delattre-Seguy. Twenty-four young people dined together and later went on to the debut dance of Miss Carolyn Bradley at the Chevy Chase Club.

The young hostess wore a white dress of glazed chintz, patterned with small flowers and very full skirt. Her debut will take place December 20 at a tea at her home in Georgetown.

'Child at Work!'

Good "timing" which often spells the difference between victory and defeat in sports can also help ease difficulties which arise in setting a child's routine, says My Baby Magazine. We do not like to be interrupted when reading or working. Neither does a child enjoy interruption of a project. However, it is sometimes necessary to take a child from something in which he is engrossed. An antagonistic rebellion can be thwarted by prefacing the parental command with "when you're through," or "in five minutes" or so. It gives junior a chance to come to a satisfactory stopping place.

Married Pair With Four Children Pay Wife's Mother $90 a Month for Full Family Upkeep; They Don't Turn a Hand; Mother Is Frazzled

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My daughter and her four young children came to live with me about three years ago, when her husband joined the Navy. They continued to live with me after her husband's discharge, since when he has been living here too.

They still pay the same board as before,—$90 monthly,—although the husband is in a position to pay moderately for himself. The housework is all done for them. All they have to do is dress the children, eat and sleep. They just sit around and watch others work, and it appears that they intend to make this their permanent home.

I am up early and late trying to keep my home in order, and it does get quite upset due to the crowding and the personal belongings they have brought with them. The very best food is served them, but nothing is ever appreciated. They are both aggressive and we all have to watch what we say in their presence.

The children are lovely and get respect and love from us, but hardly a civil word from their parents. As I am now in my later years after a very hard life, I am becoming very nervous and overworked. I am greatly distressed by the situation and would like to know how to ease the burden. Your suggestions will be deeply appreciated. D. R.

Quiet Bothers Sponging Pair

DEAR D. R.: It strikes me that you are beginning to pay dearly for neurotic excess of maternal solicitude lavished on your daughter and grandchildren.

Also, I gather that your daughter and her husband, though selfish enough to exploit your neurotic bias to the hilt, nevertheless feel vaguely guilty and on the defensive about their parasitical performance—which doubtless accounts for the touchy quality of their attitude; i. e., their sharp lookout for signs or hints that you feel "put upon," and their readiness to imagine reproof where none is intended.

Their sharpness with the children has a two-point significance. 1. It is an unconscious revelation of uneasiness about sponging off you. They are projecting their guilt feelings about themselves onto a convenient goat, namely, the children—as if to say it's the children, not us, who make all this trouble for mama: the clutter, the extra work, the financial penalty, etc.

2. Having coasted at your expense for three years, letting you do the housework and make ends meet in caring for their brood, they have grown so disused to responsibility that they cringe from the prospect of doing an adult job by their offspring nowadays,—providing food, clothing, shelter and general nurture by their own exertions,—and consequently resent the children's very existence, for posing a problem of conscience to them.

Mother Sticks Her Neck Out

THEY ARE far from happy in the present set-up. They feel uneasily the accusing pressure of your nervous tension, inflamed by exhaustion and indignation. But instead of doing the decent thing, reacting with some semblance of maturity—and either moving out, or paying fair board and doing a lion's share of the housework they cause—they are behaving as if the children were to blame for their parents' discomfiture!

In effect, they are emotionally rejecting the children, as if this would excuse their own do-nothing attitude,—would somehow take the curse off their slothful dependency. Also, maybe unconsciously this is a tricky maneuver to keep your special solicitude fixed on the children—so that you will continue to harbor the flock dirt cheap, doing slave labor in their service, for fear the children will suffer if you don't.

In any event, as said to start, I think a neurotic necessity on your part to feel—or act as if you were—indispensably important to your daughter's married welfare has put you in the position of having her responsibilities wrapped around your neck, while she loafs and gripes. You say you want relief; but are you willing to turn her loose to lead her own life as best she can with her husband's help? If so, stop playing martyr and getting no thanks for it. Put the bee on them to provide their own home—and keep your neck out of it. M. H.

District D. A. R. Holds Annual Tea

Approximately 700 members of the District of Columbia Daughters of the American Revolution played bridge or Chinese checkers yesterday. Occasion was the District Daughters' annual card party and tea to raise funds for the group's handsome headquarters at 1732 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Some played during the afternoon, some at night, and others at both day and night gatherings. Thirty-five tables were in full swing at both sessions. Proceeds will be used to remodel the headquarters kitchen.

Refreshments and meals are prepared here from recipes found in historic old cookbooks used by the housewives of the Revolution.

A popular spot yesterday was the food table where home-made cakes, pies, jellies, candies and other delicacies were sold. Mrs. Frank Sherman, who had charge of the food table, explained that all the sweets were made by District Daughters.

One of the features of the gala party was the presentation of Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, newly named president of the Chapter House Corporation. Popular Alice has just concluded a successful three-year term as treasurer general of the National Society, DAR. Previously she was State regent of the District.

Mrs. Rex Rhoades, new treasurer general of the DAR, was there, as was Mrs. Wilfred J. Clearman, District State regent; Mrs. William D. Leetch, who presided at the punch bowl, and Mrs. S. Dolan Donohoe, chairman of the Chapter House's ways and means committee.

Mrs. James Waterman, one of the moving spirits in the drive to raise money for the spacious, 28-room chapter house, was there, chatting with Miss Lillian M. Chenoweth, past vice president general of the D. C. DAR, and the first president of the Chapter House Corp.

Starting out with $70, the chapter house campaign's success is the result of long years of effort. It all began when the honorary vice president general, Mrs. Howard L. Hodgins, then State regent of the District, appointed the first chapter house committee. Articles of incorporation were taken out by the District DAR in 1924. Then in 1940 the Chapter House Corporation acquired the spacious house in the 1700 block of tree-lined Massachusetts ave.

Besides serving as headquarters for the District DAR, it has become one of the social centers for the entire Nation's Capital. The chapter house is also a treasure trove of many historical relics and articles of artistic value.

The American Legion Auxiliary's Girls' Nation will set up, at least temporarily, the "Forty-ninth State" in the Union during a week's experiment here August 8 to 14. Headquarters will be at American University.

President Truman will explain the executive branch of the national Government to high school girls attending Nation's Conclave Wednesday morning, August 13. Two girls from each State have been selected for the experiment of organizing and establishing a democratic government; which have conventions, elect a president and appoint cabinet officers as well as supreme court judges.

The petticoat politicians, after meeting the President, will be the First Lady's guests for tea.

A lecture by Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson will aid them in the organization of their own highest court, when they visit the Supreme Court. They also will visit the administrative offices of the United States Courts.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenburg and Representative Sam Rayburn will explain the legislative branch. The girls will then set up their own Congress and carry through the passage of a bill.

Frances Perkins, United States Civil Service Commissioner, Representatives Helen Gahagan Douglas and Edith Nourse Rogers will address their sessions at American University. Mrs. John Davis Lodge, wife of the Connecticut Representative and Mrs. Emily Taft Douglas, former Congresswoman from Illinois will speak to the girls Wednesday night.

Sponsored and arranged by the American Legion Auxiliary, Girls' Nation provides an opportunity for high school girls to understand the functioning of a democratic government.

Your Questions On Homemaking

Will you please tell me if ammonia fumes will help restore color to a plum colored dress that has perfume spots on it? The toilet water was the color of the dress and I did not know it would affect the color. It did not show until after the dress was cleaned at a cleaners.

M. B. K.

It's surely worth a try to see if the ammonia fumes will restore the color. If it doesn't, it may be that the perfume actually removed the color, in which case redying the dress will be the only way to completely restore it.

My problem is tables. I spilled colorless finger nail polish on an end table. I wiped it up quickly with paper handkerchief, but it still took the paint off and left a fuzzy white spot. What can I do about this and if I would have had coats of wax or shellac on the table would it have prevented this? On another table I put a coat of wax, and then shined it. A few days later I dusted it with an oiled cloth and it became cloudy. What have I done and how can I remedy it? My last favor I'd like to ask is: A friend of mine has blond oak furniture. Her table tops look and feel just like glass, they're so shiny. She washed them with soap and water then cleaned them with wax. She said she didn't think I could do that with mahogany. Is that right? How can I get them like hers?

D. T. B.

The table top will probably have to be refinished to completely remove the spot. However, you might be able to make it less conspicuous by rubbing it with rotten-stone or powdered pumice mixed to a paste with linseed oil. Rub over the stain with the grain of the wood. Polish with a clean cloth. If you had protected your table with wax, the polish wouldn't have penetrated so rapidly.

When waxing furniture, the shine comes from the amount of polishing and rubbing you do. Put on only a very thin coating of wax, allow it to dry thoroughly and then polish, and polish some more! After such treatment it is not necessary to put oil on the cloth for dusting. Use a clean lint free soft cloth and rub hard. To remove the cloudy appearance, wash your table with a warm water and mild suds and wax again as suggested above.

You certainly can use the very same method to polish your mahogany as your friend used and in time your furniture should have the finish she has built up on hers.

Will you tell me if it is possible to refinish gold-colored metal buckles on a gabardine dress that are tarnished and worn? A POST SUBSCRIBER.

There isn't much you can do to restore the gold-colored finish if it is worn. The tarnish can be re-removed, however, with a special metal polish. When you have the tarnish removed, you can protect the surface from future tarnish and wearing by coating the buckle with transparent nail polish.

Give Them a Facial

Plaster casts may be cleaned by using cold cream on a soft cloth. Water is likely to destroy the tint and gloss and should be used

Virginia Makes Law Course Look Mighty Easy

LIFE OF RILEY

Virginia L. Riley, of 3409 29th st. nw., is 24 years old today, and she has quite a few things to celebrate.

Virginia is the daughter of Patent Attorney George D. Riley, and she wants to be a lawyer, too. So she's been attending National University Law School at night, and working days as a law secretary (to Lawyer David Blanken).

Miss Riley

Ordinarily, school grades suffer when the student tries to hold down a full-time job—but the exact opposite is true in Virginia's case.

She recently won the National University's award for the highest sophomore average; the Sigma Delta Kappa scholarship award; and prizes for the highest marks and recognition in trusts and real property courses.

MORE ABOUT STREETS

"Yellogram" (snappy weekly publication of the Yellow Cab Co.) credits this answer to Bill Frye:

HACKER'S ANSWER

We recently carried an item about hackers who are content with one passenger, and leave the second one for the next cab. The mailman brings this reaction from "Veteran Cabbie:"

"Ask that altruistic driver of yours how many passengers he'd leave for the next guy if he spotted a party of four or five. Who does he think he's kidding?"

PENNY WISE

John P. Vaccaro of 41 V st nw. writes:

"Here's another easy way to help Children's Hospital. I save the pennies that I get in change when I buy cigarettes from vending machines.

"In a short time I've accumulated over a hundred, so I'm enclosing another dollar for the children. Maybe some of the other District Liners would like to join the plan."

ROOMS FOR RENT!

Mrs. J. Daniel Harding, jr., of Route 1, Laurel, Md., writes:

"My husband and I have more room than we need in our six-room house, which is 3 miles from Laurel.

"We're willing to rent three of our rooms to folks who don't mind giving up a few city conveniences. (We have electricity, but we carry our water from a nearby spring.)

"The rent is $20 per month, unfurnished. Arrangements can be made for the day-care of a child, if our tenants are both employed. Call Laurel 787J4, and leave a message for me."

PARDON US, BUT YOUR SLIPPERS ARE SHOWING

Traditionally, when a woman cleans her husband's closet, the poor guy can't find any of his possessions.

So Howard Simons of 2016 Sheridan st., Hyattsville, Md., was ready for the worst when he found that his closet had been "straightened up."

Specifically, he wanted his slippers; but five minutes of searching failed to produce any sign of them.

"Honey," he called to his better half, "what in the world did you do with my slippers when you cleaned this closet?"

"I'm sure they're in there," replied Mrs. S., joining the search. "They didn't walk away, and I'm sure nobody stole them, or . . ."

At this point Mrs. Simons began to laugh.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

Mrs. R. H. M., of 3016 Dumbarton ave. nw., reports that she recently overheard this gem:

". . . Why don't you buy one of those lovely old hysterical houses in Georgetown?"

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Today's Hand

NORTH: ♠ K 7 3 ♡ A 6 2 ◇ 10 6 ♣ A J 10 9 4

WEST: ♠ 4 ♡ Q 10 8 7 4 3 ◇ K J 7 ♣ Q 6 2

EAST: ♠ J 10 9 8 3 ♡ None ◇ Q 8 4 2 ♣ 8 7 5 3

SOUTH: SHUFORD ♠ A Q 6 5 ♡ K J 9 5 ◇ A 9 5 3 ♣ K

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 ◇	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5 ♡	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Dble	6 NT	Dble
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 7 ♡.

Stanley Shuford, Paramount Pictures executive, presents today's hand, which features an imaginative squeeze for six no-trumps.

"I retreated from East's double of six spades to six no trumps because of my four-carder, anticipating a happy heart opening to the unbid suit.

"Sure enough, the heart seven was the first card out, and after winning this trick with the nine I cashed the club king, then the spade ace and king, which revealed the distribution of that suit. On the club ace and jack I discarded diamonds, and after West won the latter trick with the queen he necessarily returned a diamond—the seven, fortunately—and my ace took East's queen.

"Now the spade queen was cashed, and after another club trick, which took care of my last diamond, the cards were very admirably arranged as follows:

NORTH: ♠ None ♡ 2 ◇ 10 ♣ 9

WEST: ♠ None ♡ Q 10 ◇ K ♣ None

EAST: ♠ J 10 ♡ None ◇ 8 ♣ None

SOUTH: ♠ 6 ♡ K J ◇ None ♣ None

"The last club squeezed West, and since he held on to his diamond I cashed two hearts for the slam, losing only to West's queen of clubs."
